Mad Killer Massacres 12 on Street In Camden

Veteran Uses Luger And Barricades Self Against 50 Police; Saved From Mob

Camden, N. J., Sept. 6 (AP). A Bible-reading former GI slaughtered 12 persons and wounded four along a busy Camden street today.

Without speaking a word, 28-year-old Howard Unruh stalked from door to door on shop-line River rd., firing his German Luger pistol with deadly accuracy.

Dead

Thomas Hamilton, 2.

Orris Smith, 6.

Mrs. Helga Zegrino, 28, a bride of one month.

James J. Hutton, 45, Westmont, insurance agent.

Clark Hoover, 33, barber.

John P. Pilarchik, 27, Pennsauken Township, a cobbler.

Alvin M. Day, jr., 24, Mantua, television service man.

Maurice Cohen, 40, druggist.

Mrs. Rose Cohen, 38, wife of Maurice.

Mrs. Minnie Cohen, 63, mother of Maurice.

Mrs. Emma Matlack, 60, Pennsauken.

Mrs. Helen Wilson, 43, daughter of Mrs. Matlack.

Wounded

Mrs. Madeline Harrie, 142 N. 32d st.

Armand, 16, her son.

Charles Peterson.

John Wilson, 10, son of Mrs. Wilson.

Unruh, his supply of 33 cartridges exhausted, returned to his home, barricaded himself in a second-floor room and shot it out with 50 policemen.

Tear gas smoked him out 45 minutes after he had fired the first shot. He surrendered as quietly as he had killed.

Lines Hold Against Mob

"Lynch him!" the mob roared. "Hang him now!"

But they didn't break through the police lines.

It wasn't until three hours later that police learned Unruh had been wounded in the buttock.

That was after 2½ hours of questioning by County Prosecutor Mitchell Cohen. Then the prisoner was taken to a hospital.

The prosecutor said Unruh told him the killings were part of "a preconceived plan."

Unruh was charged with murder.

In his oral statement to police, Unruh said his neighbors—the druggist, the barber, the shoemaker, the tailor—"had been talking about me for some time and making derogatory remarks about my character."

"I had been thinking about killing them for some time," Cohen quoted him as saying.

Bread Man Tells of Slaughter

Witness of Camden Shootings 'Can Still See the Dead Kids'

By Roxy de Marco
As Told to United Press

Camden, N. J., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—I was delivering bread along River rd. today and ran right into the middle of the shooting. It was an awful sight. I can still see the blood and the dead kids.

He didn't shoot anybody at long range. He came right close every time.

I was serving bread to a saloon when he almost shot me as I was in my truck. I had delivered bread to the corner store and I heard some kids yelling there was a man shooting a gun around the corner.

There was a lot of commotion, and then I could hear some shots. I put the kids on my truck and I drove around the corner. I heard two women screaming and hunting for their children. I asked them if the kids in my truck were their kids and they said yes. Then I thought the noise I heard was only a family argument.

I drove around the corner and stopped in front of the saloon on the wrong side of the street.

Then I saw this fellow walking in and out of places across the street and shooting people. He walked to the middle of the street just casual like. Anybody who came along was a dead duck.

"He Had the Gun on Me"

He shot the people in the Nash and the Oldsmobile as they came along and slowed up for fear of hitting him.

He had the gun on me when the kid in the Olds came up. That Luger looked like a cannon. The boy in the automobile blew his horn, and the fellow turned and fired point-blank at him.

As I went to jump from the seat into the back of the truck, he fired at me and the bullet whipped past the steering wheel. I got in the back of the truck and I heard the saloonkeeper shout, "Roxy's shot."

I yelled, "I am not," and the saloonkeeper opened the back of my truck and I was able to run into his saloon.

I saw Unruh deliberately shoot the barber and the boy on the hobby horse getting his hair cut.

Fired Pistol With Clips

You couldn't do anything. He had the gun and he must have reloaded two or three times. He shoved full clips into the pistol.

Then, too, you don't know where he was at. He popped in and out of the doors across the street. Even when the police came, they didn't know at first where he was.

Three cops lay under my truck to pick him off if he showed up. I didn't hear him say a word, but there was blood slopped all over. It was horrible, with the bodies laying all over.

You don't see things like that in movies. They just don't happen like that in the movies.

Warrant or Not

Police to Keep Up Numbers Offensive

Washington police will continue to arrest numbers suspects, even without warrants, Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett said yesterday.

Despite recent indications that the United States attorney's office will not prosecute gambling cases involving suspects arrested without warrants, Barrett said yesterday he had ordered his men to "keep harassing the numbers writers."

Barrett made his remarks when he was informed that yesterday for the fifth time in 40 days, vice squad detectives arrested a man without a warrant and charged him with operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips. The four previous cases were nol-prossed by the United States attorney's office which says it is carrying out recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court on the laws of arrest.

"Everybody wants an airtight case," Barrett said, "but who's to decide whether a case is airtight, the cops or the courts? If a police-

Giant Navy Plane Lands Safely After Dropping Engine

Honolulu, Sept. 6 (AP). — The Philippine Mars landed today three hours after an engine fell off and set fire to the wing of the giant flying boat 440 miles out in the Pacific.

The four-engined plane carried 40 passengers and a crew of 14. The Mars took off last night from the Alameda Naval Air Station on San Francisco Bay. At 4:55 a. m. (Honolulu Time) something went wrong.

Pilot Lieut. W. L. Garrett said he thought a propeller on the No. 1 engine caused the trouble.

"Terrific vibration set in," he related, "and in three or four seconds the engine was torn from the wing."

D. C. Approach To New Bridge Sags in Mud

Reinforcement Work Probably Will Cost Additional $150,000

The District approach to the new Highway Bridge over the Potomac River is sagging in the mud, and authorities are in disagreement over what to do about it.

The project bombshell was made public by the Commissioners yesterday who disclosed that reinforcement work will probably cost an additional $150,000, with the city and Federal Government each paying half.

Since March, the surface has settled 2 inches next to the river and a foot and a half farther inland—and is still settling, the city officials reported.

By way of preliminary explanation, they said "the soil underlying this abutment is reacting to the load in a manner not anticipated at the time the foundations were designed."

As explained by Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox, the original plan called for supporting the Washington side bridge approach and abutment by piles driven only 50 feet into the muddy soil, instead of 100 feet to the solid rock bed.

Asks Revision of Contract

"Friction by the surrounding mud was expected to hold up the bridge and roadway," said Cox, "but the weight of the 18 feet of fill-in dirt over these piles was just too much of a strain."

Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday sent a letter to Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, asking him to revise the bridge contract to allow for an extra $150,000 to check further sagging.

The Commissioners suggested that the settling action could be stopped if additional piles were

Forrestal's Plea Saved Symington

Late Defense Chief Kept Truman From Firing Him, Court Of Inquiry Hears

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Testimony that President Truman wanted to dismiss Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington in 1948 but was talked out of it by the late James Forrestal was given to a Navy court of inquiry yesterday.

Hugh L. Hanson, a Navy aeronautical engineer, said the former Secretary of Defense told him of the incident and added that he had repeated it to Cedric R. Worth, suspended naval official.

Worth is the admitted author of the discredited anonymous document smearing the B-36 bomber and Air Force officials. The court is trying to find out who else in the Navy took part in its preparation.

Hanson and Comdr. Thomas D. Davies, well-known Navy flier, told the court they had furnished Worth with some of the material which went into the document. Both insisted, however that they had no knowledge of what he was doing.

Truculent Turtle's Pilot

The young pilot, who flew the "Truculent Turtle" across the Pacific in a 1946 record distance flight, was sharply cross-examined for more than two hours by Capt. Sanford B. D. Wood, judge advocate member of the Navy court, on his connection with the document.

At one point, Wood challenged some of Davies' statements as "incredible." But he failed to shake the witness' repeated denials that he "knowingly" took part in preparation of the smear paper.

In his testimony, Davies brought in the name of a Lockheed Aircraft Co. representative, James Maher, as the source of two of the discredited stories insinuating wrongdoing on the part of Symington and others. He also quoted Glenn L. Martin as contributing other material which went into the anonymous document.

The story about President Truman wanting to fire Symington, however, had no connection with the B-36 charges. It concerned the Air Force chief's support of a larger Air Force than Mr. Truman had asked before the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress.

Hanson was asked about a confidential memorandum Worth prepared for the then Assistant Navy Secretary for Air John Nicholas Brown on June 14 which contained a statement similar to one in the anonymous document.

Didn't Want Him a Martyr

It read: "Mr. Forrestal indicated in conversation that he had with difficulty persuaded the President not to ask for Symington's resignation. Forrestal's reason was to avoid making Symington a popular martyr."

The Navy civilian engineer confirmed that he had told Worth of this after he had talked with Forrestal and said it was substantially what the late Secretary had said. Hanson said that Worth had frequently consulted him on technical aviation matters when he was employed in the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics here. He was transferred to a West Coast job last winter.

But he declared that except for the above and one other item contained in the anonymous document—a clipping from American Aviation Daily about a reported B-36 cutback—he knew nothing about the source of the Worth statements and charges.

Hanson also testified that he

Laborite Foreign Minister Declares He Isn't After Further Grants From U. S.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Britain's Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said tonight "I want to dispel the erroneous belief that we have come to ask for further grants to Britain on an aid basis."

He spoke to newsmen as he arrived aboard the liner Mauretania. He headed Britain's economic mission to Washington to discuss Britain's dollar crisis.

"The solution to our troubles must be along other lines," he said. "Steps must be taken which will lead to a permanent solution. We've not come here to discuss the interests of other countries."

Ottawa's Delegate Favors Proposal to Allow Use of ECA Funds Anywhere

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Canada may back a plea by Britain for permission to spend Marshall Plan dollars anywhere that she likes.

This was hinted last night as high officials of Britain, Canada and the United States prepared to meet at noon today on Britain's dollar crisis.

Canadian Minister of Finance Douglas Charles Abbott told a press conference Canada will have some "constructive suggestions," but it is primarily up to Britain to present a plan.

"Would Be a Big Help"

Asked what he thought of the proposal to lift some of the restrictions on Marshall Plan dollars, Abbott said:

"If ECA funds could be spent anywhere Britain sees fit it would be a big help to us in finding a solution."

British Foreign Minister Bevin, arriving last night with Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, is said to be ready to inject the Marshall Plan into the discussions.

Bevin is understood to feel Britain's dollar drain would be eased if ECA funds it now spends in this country to buy wheat, flour, cheese, bacon, eggs, wood pulp, paper and other commodities could be used in lieu of its own lean dollar reserves in Canada and elsewhere.

Cautious Optimism Voiced

Both United States and Canadian officials voiced cautious optimism as the stage was set for the talks.

At the Capitol, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and Secretary of State Acheson conferred for 90 minutes with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Snyder said he and Acheson "just wanted to bring the Senators up to date on the situation."

Asked if he thought the three-power talks will be "successful,"

Stevedores Boycott Bevin's Baggage

New York, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Ernest Bevin and Sir Stafford Cripps almost had to carry their own luggage off the Cunard-White Star liner Mauretania when she docked here tonight.

Members of the International Longshoremen's Association refused to handle any luggage of the official British party and members of the Mauretania's crew finally had to unload it.

A spokesman for the longshoremen said they took the action "for sentimental reasons," presumably because of the recent British use of troops to unload ships tied up by a union jurisdictional dispute.

Gruenther To Be Deputy Chief of Staff

Rear Admiral Davis To Succeed Him as Joint Staff Director

Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, now completing a two-year term as director of the joint staff, is understood in military circles to be slated for appointment soon as deputy chief of staff for plans and combat operations.

He is to be succeeded in the joint staff post, according to this information, by Rear Admiral Arthur C. Davis, now a member of the joint strategy survey committee on naval operations.

General Gruenther was chief of staff of allied force headquarters in 1942-1943, after which he served as chief of staff of the Fifth Army and then the Fifteenth Army Group until 1945, when he became department commander of United States forces in Austria.

Admiral Davis is a 1915 graduate of the United States Naval Academy and advanced through the grades to rear admiral in 1942.

U. S. Officer Sees 2 Boys, Doubts Their Return Now

Berlin, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. W. W. Hess, jr., said tonight the Russians had no intention of freeing two American youths today. He said the report Warren Oelsner, 20, Oyster Bay, Long Island, and Peter Sellers, 18, Radnor, Pa., were to be freed at 1 p. m. probably was due to a misunderstanding.

The general, chief of the United States liaison mission to the Russians, does not expect the youths will be returned immediately.

Hess today visited the boys, who disappeared July 20 on a bicycle tour of Germany, at Magdeburg in the Soviet zone. He was the first American permitted to see them.

"They objected to many things, but they did not look ill-treated," Hess reported.

Britain Buys Million Tons of Russian Grain

Payment in Sterling Reported Accepted As Pact Talks Go On

London, Sept. 6. (U.P.).—Russia has agreed to send Britain one million tons of corn, barley and oats starting at once, it was announced tonight.

It is understood that Britain will pay in pounds sterling for the 400,000 tons of corn, 500,000 tons of barley and 100,000 tons of oats provided for in the agreement.

Negotiations Continue

Diplomats at once pointed out that Russia had agreed to export this enormous amount of grains despite her cold war with the western countries, and her hot dispute with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

They took it as emphasizing that Russia does not foresee a shooting war.

In addition to the grain agreement, negotiations continue for an over-all British-Russia trade agreement providing for the exchange of other goods.

Would Offset Drastic Cuts

Diplomatic quarters also saw the grain agreement, and the continued general trade negotiations, as an indication that the British government, preparing to enter financial-economic negotiations with the United States and Canada in Washington Wednesday is trying to expand her trade in non-dollar areas. This trade would offset the drastic cuts necessary in imports which must be paid for in dollars.

Russia last year delivered to Britain 764,000 tons of grain, at prices a little under the world market price. She had agreed to send only 750,000 tons.

The new agreement was made officially effective starting September 1. Shipments are to start shortly from Russian ports.

Reds Bottle Up Tito on Capitol Cocktail Front

By The Associated Press

The diplomatic war between Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and nations in the Russian orbit spread yesterday to the cocktail front.

The Bulgarian legation cancelled an invitation sent to Yugoslav Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic, to attend a Bulgarian reception Friday on Bulgaria's national holiday.

The snub might have been in retaliation for Kosanovic's refusal to attend a Romanian reception held last week on the anniversary of Russia's "liberation" of Romania during the past war.

Kosanovic, it was learned, declined to attend this because of recent criticism of Yugoslavia by Romania's Foreign Minister Anna Pauker.

Thomas Orders Probe of Story On Egg Price Prop Juggling

By the United Press

Chairman Elmer Thomas of the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday ordered an investigation of reports that alleged "manipulation" of the Government's egg price support program is forcing up retail egg prices.

The Oklahoma Democrat also introduced legislation that would permit the Secretary of Agriculture to reduce the support level for the 1949 egg and Irish potato crops.

Thomas said he had been informed that the alleged "manipulation" of the egg program had resulted in surplus eggs being diverted to the powdered market, where they are not needed, instead of being sent into shortage areas in an effort to haul down prices.

He appointed Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) former Secretary of Agriculture, to head a special subcommittee to look into the situation and report back to the full committee with recommendations.

Thomas said he has been told that the egg industry is "almost under the control of a few large brokers."

"It seems that the whole program is on a wrong basis," he added. "If permitted to continue, it will have an adverse influence on the entire farm commodity support program."

Thomas suggested that the subcommittee call Roy W. Lennartson, assistant chief of the Agriculture Department's egg branch, representatives of the Great Western Distributors, Peter Fox & Sons and L. C. Schreiber. All three are Chicago firms.

He said he is unable to understand why Oklahoma farmers are getting only 35 cents a dozen for eggs under the price support program when they are selling for as much as 80 cents a dozen in the industrial East.

Both farmers and consumers would be helped, he said, if such surplus eggs were shipped to big consuming areas.

"I know of no market for powdered eggs," he asserted.

He said there are only one million cases of eggs in cold storage this year compared with 3,500,000 cases a year ago.

Under his bill, given to the subcommittee for its consideration, eggs and potatoes would be erased from the list of commodities the Government must support.

It then would instruct the secretary to set a new price support level for the remainder of the 1949 potato and egg crops which would result in a program which could be carried out "without excessive loss or cost."

President Is Real Objective Of Probers, Bennett Asserts

Holland, Mich., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—David A. Bennett, perfume manufacturer whose name has figured prominently in the "five percenter" inquiry, said today that "cheap partisan politicians" are using Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan to embarrass President Truman.

In a copyrighted interview with the Holland Sentinel, the ailing Bennett said Senate investigators are "trying to use me the same way, but they aren't going to get away with it."

Explosive Bacillus

Death of 2-Year-Old Blamed On Common Germ Gone Wild

Two-year-old Richard Cahill, of Arlington, Va., died of a rare, racing invasion of a common germ, it was officially reported yesterday.

Pathologists at the Arlington County Hospital tagged the fatal invader as Friedlander's bacillus, an organism frequently found lurking in the nose and throat.

The youngster collapsed and died last Friday while playing in apparently perfect health on the front lawn of his parents' home, at 2034 N. Cleveland st., Arlington.

Cause of death was given yesterday as acute fulminating (explosively rapid and severe) infection of the bloodstream by the bacillus, and its end result, a noncontagious form of meningitis.

In routine swab tests, the pathologists said, as many as one of every four persons tested have been found infected with Friedlander's bacillus. Normally, however, body forces resist the germ before it can take hold, they said, running up clinical warning signals which would alert parents and the physician.

Even when the germ succeeds in overcoming resistance it usually causes a lobar pneumonia which, although once highly fatal, now yields readily to sulfa drugs and

Tokyo Rocked By Explosives Blast in Suburb

Tokyo (Wednesday), Sept. 7 (U.P.). Nine tons of explosives stored in a suburban Tokyo warehouse blew up today in the biggest detonation heard here since the war's end.

The blast destroyed two 30 by 75 foot concrete powder storage blockhouses, wrecked four others, and damaged two more.

It was so violent that it rocked downtown Tokyo, 15 miles distant, and left a gaping hole 360 feet in diameter that resembled the crater of a small volcano.

The blast rolled up a pillar of smoke described by witnesses as "like the pictures of the atomic bomb explosion."

Johnson Plan Kills Row Over Junkets

Lines Drawn

Senate Fight DueToday on Trade Pacts

By The Associated Press

Both Democratic and Republican leaders appeared to be taking a "no-compromise" attitude yesterday on the eve of a hard Senate fight over reciprocal legislation to extend the reciprocal trade treaty program.

Aides gave out word that Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic Senate leader, will oppose any compromise with Republicans who want to retain the "peril point" provision that the Republican Eightieth Congress wrote into the Trade Agreements Act.

This provision requires the Tariff Commission to advise the President of the point beyond which proposed tariff concessions cannot go without endangering United States producers, and compels him to explain to Congress if he wants concessions beyond the "peril points."

Senator Millikin of Colorado, ranking Republican member of the Senate Finance Committee, commented to reporters:

"I think we will get the peril point provision."

The Senate reconvenes today after a week's vacation to tackle the trade agreements issue. Before it will be a House-approved bill which would extend the trade treaty law as it existed before the Eightieth Congress. At that time it simply gave the President authority to negotiate tariff-cutting trade agreements with other nations, and did not require the tariff commission to calculate "peril points."

Preparing for the battle which leaders expected to rage on the Senate floor for 10 days or two weeks, Lucas called all Democratic Senators to a conference on Thursday.

By The Associated Press

The angry flare-up over free-loading plane trips by Congressmen died down yesterday with an agreement that legislators and officials will use Government aircraft only for "public business."

It will be strictly up to them to decide whether their junkets by air—at home and abroad—are public business. Secretary of Defense Johnson will take their word for it.

The row started when Johnson suggested that some Senators planning a world tour take a commercial plane for part of the trip, instead of an Air Force plane. That, he said, would save money.

Early Intervenes

The understanding was reached after Stephen Early, former aide to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, intervened between Johnson and Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.).

Johnson was out of town Monday when Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) arranged a pow-wow between Thomas and Early, now Undersecretary of Defense. They talked it over and the ruckus was settled.

As a result, Thomas yesterday dropped his demand that Johnson provide him full information about use of military aircraft by President Truman, Vice President Barkley and other top Government officials—including Johnson.

"Why cause them all that trouble?" commented Thomas, who is chairman of a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee that passes on funds for the armed forces. He plans to lead members of the group to Europe soon to check on expenditures of public funds.

Thomas' request to Johnson to arange air transportation for the group in Europe—and for eight of the party to fly on around the world en route home—started all of the feudin' and fussin'.

Johnson said okay for the European phase of the trip where the Military Air Transport Service flies regular scheduled flights. He said okay, too, for the jaunt from Tokyo to the United States for the tailend of the round-the-world junket. MATS flies that route regularly, too.

But the secretary balked at having a MATS plane fly the Senators on the Cairo-to-Tokyo leg of the trip. He said (1) MATS doesn't fly that route regularly, and (2) commercial tickets would cost less than to have a military plane take the party.

Thomas Irked

Irked by Johnson's reply, Thomas challenged the use of military craft by top Government officials, including the President. And he demanded full information about costs of such flights.

Then Early stepped in to put out the fire.

Thomas outlined the agreement as follows:

1. The Defense Department will issue a policy statement to "restrict the use of military planes to public business."

2. Military planes will be furnished Congressmen and other Government officials if they request them and state it is "public business."

3. The Defense Secretary will not question the reasons for such requests "but will depend on their honor not to abuse the privilege."

4. Thomas said he agrees with Johnson that it would be cheaper and safer for the Senators going on around the world to make the run from Cairo to Tokyo by commercial plane. Further, he said, the Senators would have to make their own arrangements — he doesn't plan to go along.

Senator Seeks Broader Probe Of Percenters

By Robert S. Allen

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) one of the "5-percenter" probers, wants to expand the investigation.

She favors the committee's checking on all businessmen who were flown to Germany and Japan in military planes immediately after VE and VJ-Day. Mr. Smith believes a lot of information will be uncovered.

Her proposal grew out of the disclosure that John Maragon, "good friend" of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, got free military transportation to Europe in 1945 for private business purposes. This was the trip that culminated in Maragon's attempt to smuggle in valuable perfume oils in champagne bottles.

Mrs. Smith has been informed that a number of big business and Wall Street banking associates of certain former high Pentagon officials got similar free trips at public expense.

Mrs. Smith wants the committee to examine the logs of the old Air Transport Command (ATC) and the former Navy Air Transport Service (NATS). They are now merged as the Military Air Transport Services (MATS), but their records are still available. These would show who traveled where on free military transportation.

Wrong Man—An alderly woman stopped Representative Walter Huber (D., Ohio) on the steps of the Capitol and asked if he thought "there was any danger" that Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., might become President.

"Why not?" said Huber affably. "His father had a life expectancy of 15 or 20 years when he came to Washington, and Junior is still a youngster. He's good for at least 40 or 50 years. And after him, there is another Franklin D. Roosevelt of still a younger generation. I would say there is a good possibility for a dynasty right down to the year 2000."

"How terrifying," gasped the woman. "That is truly dismaying, Mr. Scott."

"I am not Hugh Scott," laughed Huber. "You have the wrong man. Scott is the millionaire former chairman of the Republican National Committee. I'm just a New Dealer from Akron."

Truman Lands After Talks, Visit to Home

President Truman landed here aboard his plane the Independence at 4:17 p.m. yesterday after a flight from Grand View, Mo.

Earlier, the President had spent a rainy two hours visiting his relatives at Independence, Mo. He had flown to Missouri Monday after making speeches at Pittsburgh and at Des Moines, Iowa.

Mr. Truman apparently slept late in his home at Independence on this, his first visit here since he won the Presidency last November. Then, for two hours, he played tag with a series of showers while visiting kinfolk.

Mrs. Truman, after first planning to fly back to Washington with him, said yesterday her mother had suffered a fall and was under treatment. The First Lady elected to stay here.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, went to Glascow, Mo., Monday night to visit his aged and ailing mother and did not return to Washington aboard the "Independence."

Improvement Is Sustained By Rtuledge

York, Maine, Sept. 6 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Wiley B. Rutledge has emerged sufficiently from a coma to talk to members of his family and nurses, a hospital spokesman said today.

The 55-year-old jurist has suffered a cerebral hemorrhage.

Dr. Elmer Tower said Justice Rutledge continues to hold a slight improvement noted yesterday, when he took nourishment for the first time since he sank into a coma last Friday.

Dr. Tower said Justice Rutledge spent a quiet night and that he still has periods of semiconsciousness. The physician said the jurist was "conscious quite a bit of the time" yesterday.

Justice Rutledge has been at York Hospital 10 days.

Hoover Unit Missed Chance To Educate, Economist Says

New York, Sept. 7.—Criticism that the Hoover Commission on reorganization of the Federal Government did not fulfill its major function of "educating the public and helping to change the climate of opinion" came today from Dr. Herman Finer, Chicago University economist.

Dr. Finer's views are expressed in the September issue of the Political Science Quarterly published at Columbia University.

Dr. Finer, author of "The Road to Reaction," wrote that the commission, through failure to draw "valid conclusions from the mountains of available data, does not merely falter, it abdicates and tumbles from truth to triteness."

While approving the fact-finding job done by the commission, Dr. Finer asserted the survey had missed an opportunity for constructive criticism which will not recur for "another 10 or 20 years."

In its "blinding obsession with management," according to Professor Finer, the commission's committee on personnel management was especially negligent.

"All it did was to neglect any consideration of the intellect and character of the officials so urgently needed, while it concentrated on the machinery, down to the very minutiae of whether there should be one or three men at the top of the Civil Service Commission."

Dr. Finer praised the portions of the reports pertaining to the reorganization of governmental departments where the commission made intensive inward proposals for change, almost always of "a most drastic nature."

He described these materials as "the most concretely valuable part" of the commission's work, where "much good must result from the institution of the arranfements and principles it recommends."

Nevertheless, Dr. Finer pointed out, the commission "has almost utterly abdicated in the field of hte superior unity of the whole executive branch."

He contended that "the commission did not quite know what it wanted with the Presidency" and offered no workable solution to the problem of distributing the responsibilities now carried by the President.

He pleaded for "a full Cabinet system with collective responsibility as the crying need of America."

Other articles in the Quarterly include an intensive study of state planning of internal improvements in the state of Virginia during the nineteenth century, by the Columbia University economist, Professor Carter Goodrich.

Churchill Reported Pajama Top Devotee

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Today's hot weather news was a report that Winston Churchill wears only the tops of his pajamas "or, in the hot weather, nothing at all."

The ultra-Conservative Weekly Recorder listed the wartime British Prime Minister among a number of Britons who do not consider pajama trousers necessary for health, appearance or modesty. No authority was cited for the report.

McCarthy Aide Denies Claim By Maragon

By The Associated Press

A former aide to Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), denied yesterday that John Maragon had any official connection with a party given for McCarthy when he was sworn in as Senator in 1947.

Maragon, man about town and key figure in the Senate's "5-percenter" inquiry, told reporters last week he had arranged the party at the request of McCarthy's campaign manager.

Victor A. Johnston, who managed the McCarthy campaign in 1946 and later served as his executive assistant, disputed this.

Tells of Surprise

Johnston told a reporter by telephone from Grand Forks, N. Dak., that the party was given by Wisconsin friends and neither he nor McCarthy had met Maragon until the affair was held January 3, 1947.

Both he and McCarthy were surprised, Johnston added, when they found Maragon acting as if he were one of the hosts at the gathering.

McCarthy is a member of the Senate investigating committee that has been looking into reports that some persons offered for a fee—usually 5 per cent—to use influence to help businessmen get Government contracts. He has said that Maragon ought to be indicted for perjury as a result of testimony before the committee.

Johnston also related a disagreement he and Maragon had at the party for McCarthy involving some cheese that a Wisconsin maker was supposed to have sent for the affair.

A couple of days later, Johnston recalled, he received a middle-of-the-night telephone call from Maragon.

As reported by Johnston, the conversation went this way:

Maragon: You know, you aren't going to do very well in this town.

Johnston: Why not?

Maragon: Well, you have the misfortune to get in bad with me.

Gen. Parks Returns To Information Post

Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, deputy Army commander in the Pacific, yesterday returned to the post of chief of Army public information.

He succeeds the late Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Pritchard who died July 10 in an explosion of a cabin cruiser here.

General Parks held the post from December, 1945, until August 23, 1948, when he was transferred to the Pacific.

Navy's Brass Meets Today On Economy

By James Warner
NYHT News Service

The Navy's top brass was summoned to meet here today to discuss how to put into effect recent economy slashes ordered by Defense Secretary Johnson, as a broad hint was given that the seapower arm will be cut back another 400 million dollars in spending during the current fiscal year.

All sea, air and shore commanders of the Navy will attend the four-day conference, called by Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations. It will be the largest conference of top Navy commanders in two years.

Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, gave the hint of a new cutback in Navy funds in an address at Richmond, Va., yesterday when he declared that the Navy will have about four billion dollars to spend during the current fiscal year, as opposed to about $4,900,000,000 during the year which ended June 30.

Bill Still Pending

Inasmuch as the military appropriations bill, still pending in Congress, allots about $4,400,000,000 to the Navy during the current fiscal year, there was immediate speculation that Secretary Johnson, in a new economy move, proposes to order the Navy to hold its spending to 400 million dollars below the expected congressional allotment. Likewise it was observed that similar orders may be expected by the Army and Air Force in the Secretary's drive to have $1,500,000,000 a year in the three services.

Kimball's statement was regarded as particularly meaningful by Pentagon observers because copies of his speech, already distributed, were pulled back in midmorning today for rewriting—including the insertion of the four-billion-dollar figure.

Half a Billion Saving Seen

Secretary Johnson, in his August 24 cutback order for removal of 135,000 civilians and 12,071 officers from military payrolls and closing of 51 military establishments—which the Navy commanders are meeting to discuss—estimated that this move will save up to 500 million dollars a year.

The Navy commanders are expected to discuss how the August 24 cutbacks will be made effective in their areas, and to discuss further economies and a probably smaller budget for the next fiscal year. Already defense officials are talking about an over-all budget request of between 13.4 and 13.7 billions for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1950, working toward a budget of not more than 12 billions for the following fiscal year. As passed by the House, the current year appropriation bill gave the military department a total of $15,900,000,000, but the Senate cut this back to $14,800,000,000.

Railroad Invokes Freight Embargo

St. Louis, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Missouri-Pacific Railroad announced today it is placing an embargo on freight shipments at midnight tonight because of a strike of operating employes set for next Friday.

An embargo on passenger, mail, baggage and express service will start at midnight Thursday, the railroad announced.

The walkout would tie up operation of the line and idle about 30,000 MOPAC employes.

The strike by 5000 operating employes was set for 4 p. m. (EDT) Friday by four brotherhoods as a result of 282 unsettled claims. The grievances involve more than three million dollars and are based on differences in interpretation of operating rules, a union official said.

Paul J. Neff, chief executive officer of the railroad, announced that layoff notices, to be effective at strike time, have been sent to 25,000 non-striking employes who would be affected by the walkout.

In Washington the National (railway) Mediation Board said today it has proposed arbitration of the dispute.

Officials said the proposal, acceptable to the railroad, is being considered by the four unions involved. They are the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Firemen and Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors.

Such grievances as those involved are supposed to be settled, under the Railway Labor Law, by the Railroad Adjustment Board. That agency, however, is years behind in its work and its delays in handling cases have often been so long the unions have been reluctant to submit disputes.

Now on Campaign

Taft Advises President to Fire Vaughan

Cleveland, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said today President Truman should fire his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan.

Taft made his statement at a press conference, during which he twitted the President on Mr. Truman's Labor Day prediction that the Taft-Hartley law will be repealed.

"General Vaughan should have been dismissed long ago," Taft said.

Speaking of the Taft-Hartley Act, its co-author said, "I don't know how the President will repeal it in this session. It may be one of the issues of the 1950 campaign but it won't be repealed by the present Congress."

The senior Ohio Senator, now on a 100-speech campaign throughout Ohio, added that "we get letters from labor people every day approving the Taft-Hartley Act."

Communication Union Bows to T-H Act

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—A spokesman for the CIO American Communications Association said today that the international executive board of the union has agreed to comply with the Taft-Hartley Act.

The ACA, one of the few remaining unions in the Country which had refused to recognize the Act, lost a three-month strike against the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Co. last year.

The company refused to deal with the union because of its failure to qualify under the Taft-Hartley law.

British TUC Votes Heavily Against Reds

Bridlington, England, Sept. 6 (AP).—The British Trades Union Congress (TUC) handed Communists three spankings today, and heard a promise of United States labor support in Britain's economic difficulties.

A debate on communism during the TUC's eighty-first congress erupted into disorder when TUC President Sir William Lawther declared some delegates were "talkin' a lot of bunk."

"You shut up," he bellowed at one heckler; and at another, "either keep your seat or get out."

The TUC meeting indorsed the anti-Communist stand of its general council by three overwhelming votes:

1. It approved the general council's report condemning Communist activities in Britain's unions. Delegates representing 6,746,000 members voted for approval, 760,000 against.

2. It supported the council's withdrawal last year from the World Federation of Trade Unions, which the council said was Communist-led. On this ballot, delegates representing 6,248,000 members approved the action; 1,017,000 opposed it.

3. It rejected by the same vote a reverse motion—regreting withdrawal from the WFTU and calling for reaffiliation.

The American promise of support was made by Harry C. Bates, a vice president and member of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor.

Injunction Releases 2 Ships for Hawaii

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A temporary injunction that will release vessels of Hawaii's biggest cargo-carrier to haul freight to the strikebound islands was issued in Federal court today.

The injunction and temporary restraining order, sought by the National Labor Relations Board, prohibits the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union from picketing two Matson Line vessels in San Francisco until it can be determined whether such a blockade constitutes a secondary boycott.

A hearing on a request for a permanent injunction will be held Thursday.

The legal move by the NLRB, which charged that the picketing was in violation of the secondary boycott provisions of the Taft-Hartley Law, was a counter-measure to the ILWU strategy in flying three Honolulu longshoremen to the mainland to picket San Francisco and Wilmington, Calif., docks.

The strategy had tied up the Hawaiian Refiner and the Hawaiian Logger which Matson had announced were ready to accept cargoes for the islands.

New Effort to End Hawaii Strike Set

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—A new effort will begin tomorrow to end the 129-day-old dock strike that has all but isolated Hawaii from steamship contact with the rest of the world.

Leaders of the Hawaii Employers Council and of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union are to meet at 3 p. m. (EDT) with Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

$125,000 Passed In Counterfeit Travel Checks

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Up to $125,000 in counterfeit travelers checks have been passed in American cities in the last 12 days the American Express Co. said today.

One arrest in the case has been made in Los Angeles. Four men are held by Detroit police. Company agents and the FBI have been investigating.

The first bad checks were spotted in Baltimore on August 25. Since the largest check issued is for only $100, at least 1250 separate checks would have to be passed to total $125,000.

double feature: "Fear in the Night" and "For You I Die.")

In his room police found an "arsenal of weapons," guns, knives and clubs. A target range and bullet-making equipment were in the basement of the building.

Killer's Name Means 'Unrest' in German

Camden, N. J., Sept. 6 (AP).—Students of German noted a strange coincidence today in the name of Howard Unruh, slayer of 12 persons in a door-to-door shooting through a Camden neighborhood.

The word unruh in German, means "unrest."

On the bed, a thumb-worn Bible was found open at Chapter 24 of the Gospel according to St. Mathew. The passage reads:

"And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of war: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass but the end is not yet."

Neighbors said Unruh often "walked along the street reading a Bible."

Unruh got up about 7 a. m., and his mother gave him breakfast. Then:

"I put my preconceived plan into execution."

Police learned that Unruh had quarreled with Maurice Cohen, 40-year-old druggist who lived next door, at 3200 River rd., over using Cohen's yard to get to and from the street. Unruh's home has no front entrance.

And it was to the Cohen drug store that Unruh went to start his massacre.

He walked from his home at 8:20 a. m. (EST), neatly dressed in a light suit and white shirt and bow tie. He strode into the drug store.

Cohen's wife, Rose, 38, saw the pistol. She screamed:

"It's a maniac! He's got a gun!"

Puts Son in Closet

She dashed upstairs to her 12-year-old son, Charles, and shoved him into a closet.

Unruh followed her upstairs. In a bedroom he slew Cohen's mother, Minnie, 63, with a single shot.

He met Cohen's wife on the stairs, and dropped her with another bullet.

Cohen fled out the back door with Unruh in pursuit. He fired again, and Cohen spun, staggered through a gate he had built to keep Unruh from crossing the yard. He fell dead in a gutter.

Meanwhile, Unruh stalked through the gate, turned the corner and started to shoot his way from shop to shop.

Cars stopped for a traffic light and Unruh turned his gun on them.

"They stopped," said Detective Marshall Thompson, 'then they got it."

"Nobody who walked on that street was safe."

Unruh, the shop-to-shop slaughter ended, walked back to his second-floor room.

A detail of 50 police opened fire on him, then heaved tear gas through an open window.

A policeman, pistol in hand, leaned from a window shouting: "We got him!"

In a few moments Unruh stumbled out of his room.

Most of those shot down by Unruh lived near him in the residential neighborhood of this city of 100,000 across the Delaware River from Philadelphia.

Among the dead were a druggist, shoemaker and barber. Six-year-old Orris Smith was killed as he sat on a hobby horse in the barber-shop getting his hair cut.

At point-blank range, Unruh killed an insurance salesman in the doorway of the drug store. He strode up to two cars stoped at a traffic light, shot and killed a man and two women, wounded a boy.

Unruh lived with his mother behind and above an empty store. She was ironing when the first shots rang out. Police could not say what happened to her after that.

Along with 700 cartridges and other equipment for guns, police found in Unruh's room a book called "The Shooter's Bible," published by an ammunition and arms company. They also found gun-cleaning oil, spare parts for guns, and a machine for reloading cartridges.

He was overseas for three years with a field artillery unit in Germany and Austria. He wasn't hurt.

His brother, James Unruh, of Haddonfield, N. J., said:

"I don't know how this ever happened, or why, but I certainly know it is due to my brother's Army service. Since he came home he didn't seem to be the same. He was nervous. He never acted like his old self.

"I saw Howard this morning and there was no sign of depression on him. He was always nice to my mother and me, and this morning he didn't seem any different."

Killer Ceases Fire to Answer Phone, Returns to Slaughter

By Philip W. Buxton
Camden Evening Courier Reporter

Camden, N. J., Sept. 6 (AP).—Howard B. Unruh, wholesale killer, was not too busy to answer the telephone today while he was still shooting it out with police in his home at 3202 River ave.

Purely on a hunch, I called Camden 4-2490-W, which is the number listed for Unruh. The time was shortly after 10 a. m., while Unruh was still exchanging shots with police.

I was about to hang up when:

"Hello," said a strong, clear voice.

"Is this Howard?" I asked.

"Yes," said the voice, "this is Howard. What's the last name of the party you want?"

"Unruh," I said.

"Who are you and what do you want?"

"I'm a friend and I want to know what they're doing to you."

"Well, they haven't done anything yet, but I'm doing plenty to them."

"How many have you killed?"

"I don't know yet—I haven't counted 'em, but it looks like a pretty good score."

"Why are you killing people?"

"I don't know. I can't answer that yet—I'm too busy. I'll have to talk to you later. A couple of friends are coming to get me."

With that last statement there was a click on the other end of the phone. The man had hung up.

Lake Michigan Squall Kills 4

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP).—A battered, drifting sailboat with a young bride's body lashed to the rigging told today the story of a sudden squall that brought death to four holiday sailors.

The body was that of Mrs. Laurel Neitzel, 22, of Chicago.

She and her husband, Carl Neitzel, 29, an engineer, set sail on Lake Michigan at 5 a. m. Sunday for Michigan City, Ind., with Louis D. MacQuessan, 24, and his wife Clarice, 22, both of Chicago.

They left the Jackson Park Yacht Harbor aboard the 30-foot auxiliary yawl Lorelei II. Nothing more was heard of the four until the swamped craft was located this morning by the Coast Guard.

Chief Warrant Boatswain Kenneth Foster, commanding officer of the Old Chicago Station, said Mrs. Neitzel's body, bruised and bloody, with part of her clothing torn away, was lashed to the forestay.

The shredded remnants of a life jacket were bound to the jigger-mast aft, indicating that another person had been secured for safety, then swept away.

Boatswain's Mate Glen McGeorge, USCG, said the condition of the body indicated the woman had been dead 24 hours.

The Weather Bureau said there were thunder squalls and unofficial reports of 70-mile-an-hour gusts of wind over the southern part of Lake Michigan Sunday afternoon.

based on two words economically."

Asked by a newsman whether any one country is to blame for Britain's plight, he replied:

"We are not here to blame anybody, and we're not going to allow anyone to blame us."

Bevin is accompanied by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps and other government officials. The meetings with American and Canadian officials open tomorrow.

The purpose of the Washington meeting, Bevin said, is "to discuss the balance of payment difficulties between the sterling and dollar areas and measures which could be taken to right the existing disequilibrium between the two areas both in the long and short term."

"Very Full Program"

He said the British delegation has brought "a very full program of business."

He viewed the Washington conference as a means "to win the struggle for one world, one world of free and democratic peoples."

But the talks are "very serious," he added, as they effect world politics.

Bevin beamed broadly at times as he chatted.

He was serious, however, when he amplified on his one-world theme:

"It has never been assumed by us that we are going to accomplish all this in five days."

He mentioned British efforts to cement the Brussels defense pact, bring a closer association of British Commonwealth members, implement the North Atlantic Pact, form a Council of Europe and set up a free government in western Germany.

Calls Advances Impressive

Then he said of these aims:

"I doubt that so many impressive and far-reaching political advances have ever been made in any other 18 months in the world's history.'

American aid or encouragement play a part in all these formidable tasks, Bevin added.

"All this," he said, "is progress toward one world outside the oligarchy of Soviet Russia."

But, Bevin added, if economic difficulties cannot be solved, all these ambitions and achievements may be frustrated.

The Foreign Secretary was quick to praise American aid to Britain and other war-ravished areas abroad.

"It is just nonsense to say that the Marshall Plan or the Organization for European Economic Co-operation have failed," he said. "I don't know what would have happened without it. It has saved Europe from complete chaos and ruin."

Appeals to U. S. Press

Bevin appealed to the American press not to "blow up" every difficulty between his country and the United States.

Fundamentally, he added, Britain and the United States are not "at any great variance."

"The sterling and dollar areas are the two great trading areas in the world," Bevin said. "Here lies the key to many other problems."

He said the aims in both areas are the same—a better, richer life for the individual and the community.

Some of his answers to newsmens questions were fast and somewhat edged in tone.

A newsman asked about charges that Bevin's Socialist government is guilty of "bungling" leading to its grave economic state.

"Unintelligent people," Bevin replied, "always have looked for a scapegoat."

Cripps Stands Firm

Sir Stafford Cripps told interviewers he would "stand by" his recent decision against devaluating the pound. This has been suggested in this country as a means of stimulating British trade.

About 700 anti-British pickets chanted and waved placards as the liner docked.

They called themselves the "America-Irish Minutemen."

Their placards and banners carried such slogans as:

"England, get out. America said it in 1776, Ireland says it now."

The pickets' signs also demanded the release of 14 Irish Republican Army prisoners and waved a banner which said:

"Boycott British and six-county (Northern Ireland, goods until these men are released."

One placard addressed to Mauretania passengers said:

"If you lost your watch, just remember Bevin and Cripps were aboard."

Bevin and his party were scheduled to leave for Washington by train in a few hours. They are due in the Capital at 7:15 a. m. (EDT) Wednesday.

Snyder said merely: "We hope they will be helpful."

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) was asked if the United States has a dollar plan to present.

"That's up to them—the British," Connally replied.

Today's preliminary conference of the three powers will be held in the new State Department Building. Immediately after the initial talk, Snyder said, he will advise reporters on plans for the conference.

Attending the preliminary conference, limited to the ministers, will be Bevin, Cripps, British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, Canadian Secretary of State for External Affairs Lester Pearson, Abbott, Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong, Acheson, Snyder and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman.

Abbott and Pearson, who arrived here Monday, held a joint press conference yesterday at the Canadian Embassy.

Abbott repeated that he "expected no miracles in three or four days" but held out reasonable hope for "substantial progress."

Canada's 50-year-old Finance Minister and former Minister of National Defense declined to spell out Canada's dollar "suggestions" but said:

"They will be in a field that will enable the dollar deficiency countries to expand their exports."

He stressed that Canada is the United States' biggest single trade outlet and hinted it might have to cut back on some of these imports unless Britain's dollar deficiency is solved.

"We've always had to rely on being able to convert the proceeds of our sales to the United Kingdom in order to pay for our imports from the United States," he said.

He said Canada's only dollar problem is this:

"Our traditional customers aren't able to pay us in the kind of money we need to buy goods in the United States."

Proposals to devalue the pound, on the theory it lowers dollar prices for British exports and thus steps up sales abroad, were completely sidestepped by Abbott.

He refused to comment on "either the desirability or effect of devaluation."

He hinted that subject might be left to the second annual conference of the International Bank and Monetary Fund which meets here next week.

Shirley May Forced to Quit Channel Six Miles From Goal

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Shirley May France is assisted ashore at Dover after failing channel.

In the English Channel, Sept. 6 (AP).—Shirley May France failed in an attempt to swim the English Channel today, after battling her way through swirling tides to within less than 6 miles of her goal—the White Cliffs of Dover.

Robbed of all her strength by the icy water and swift currents of the Channel, the Somerset, Mass., schoolgirl was dragged moaning from the water. She struggled to keep from being pulled into the boat. In tears she pleaded for a chance to keep on.

The end came at 4:05 p. m. (10:05 a. m. EST) after she had been in the icy waters 10½ hours. Observers estimated she had swum more than 30 miles on a zig-zagging course.

"Please—please—leave me in," the 17-year-old swimmer begged her coach, Harry Boudakian.

She had fought to keep up the battle, spurred on by a message from her mother and by the shouted encouragement of her father, J. Walter France, who was on one of the boats accompanying her.

The Dover cliffs, shining in the sun, had been within her view for two and a half hours. "Look how near it is," she cried hysterically when she resisted attempts to make her give up.

It is 19 miles across the English Channel but the tides force swimmers to travel a much greater distance.

Shirley May reached Dover at 5:45 p. m. (11:45 a. m. EST) in the pilot boat Providence. She walked the 20 yards from the beach to the East Cliff Hotel, headquarters of channel swimmers, and climbed the stairs unassisted.

Her father told reporters:

"She fought like a wildcat when we tried to get her out of the water. We finally had to send in two boys to disqualify her."

The boys were John Temme and Tony Brierly, both 18.

Asked about his daughter's plans, France said: "We aren't going to try again this year. Next year, maybe."

never heard of the document until the congressional investigation of the B-36 started.

The three-man court—consisting of Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, Vice Admiral Donald B. Beary and Rear Admiral Glenn B. Davis—convened in a paneled Navy conference room yesterday morning. Although public, there were empty seats.

Wave Chief Yeoman Virginia Charles, Worth's secretary, was the first witness called. Speaking almost inaudibly, she testified that Worth had dictated the memo to her and she had typed it. Under close cross-examination, she said she had never heard her boss talk to anyone about its contents.

No Secrets in Memo

As the session opened, a letter from the Office of Naval Intelligence was put in evidence, declaring that the anonymous memo contains no "classified" information of Navy origin. It pointed out, however, that other Government agencies classify material as "secret," "confidential," etc. One of the questions the court is to determine is whether any secrets were revealed in the memo.

Davies testified that until this summer Worth was his superior at the Navy Department and that he answered questions and provided him with information on technical aviation matters. The Navy flier said he had told Worth the following stories — most of them now discredited—which appeared in the smear memo:

(1) That Symington spent much time at the Palm Spring, Calif. ranch of Floyd Odlum, board chairman of Consolidated - Vultee, makers of the B-36, as shown by the log of the Secretary's plane. The inference in the document was that the close relationship of Odlum and Symington and the former's Democratic campaign contributions influenced the Air Force decision to place heavy B-36 orders.

(2) That Col. Frank Wolfe, USAF (retired), and a brother of Maj. Gen. K. B. Wolfe, Air Force procurement chief, bought an expensive Beverly Hills home after renegotiating a contract with Symington's wartime company without loss to the latter. House probers pronounced this "completely false," after a West Coast investigation.

Both of the above stories said Davies, were told by James Maher, of Lockheed. Under cross-examination, he declared he passed on such "rumors" to Worth and others in the Navy. Davies said he'd made no attempt to check the report about Wolfe but had attempted to get the information about Symington's visits to Odlum through the Lockheed company, makers of his airplane.

Heard Martin Charge

(3) That the Air Force in January, 1948, had prepared a directive cancelling B-36 procurement but that Harvey Tafe, Convair Washington representative, had prevented its being signed. Davies said Tafe told him the story at a National Aeronautical Association luncheon in March, 1949. Tafe denied any knowledge of it during testimony on Capitol Hill.

Davies also testified he had discussed with Worth the B-36 performance data contained in the document.

He said he was present when Glenn Martin told Worth of another item which appeared in the smear paper. It declared that after the war General Wolfe had tried to cancel Martin's aircraft turret contracts and give all turret work to Emerson Electric — which Symington once headed. The latter testified that he severed all connection with the company after the war.

Davies said he did not know how the appointment with Martin was arranged. Martin engineers had asked him to speak before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences April 13, and at the last minute Worth decided to make the trip to Baltimore with him. Davies said he was present at the meeting with Martin before the institute dinner, but heard no talk of the memorandum then. (Worth testified that subsequently he delivered a copy to Martin to turn over to Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.)

Under sharp questioning, the Navy flier insisted he knew nothing of Worth's purpose in visiting Martin and had no knowledge of the existence of the document until later.

Glenn Martin to Appear

In late July, Davies said, either Clinton Brown of the House Armed Services Committee or Comdr. David Martineau, Navy legislative representative, told him that Chairman Carl Vinson of the committee knew Worth to be the author of the document.

Captain Wood demanded why Davies hadn't told his superiors then of his knowledge of Worth's activities. He replied that he done nothing because "this matter was being carried on at the political level in the Navy."

"I decided I had better stay out of it," he added.

Wood said he planned to call Rear Admiral Thomas B. Inglis, Navy intelligence chief, and Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, among others today. Others on the list of witnesses: Glenn Martin, Stuart Barber, former newsman Robert McCord, Capt. J. L. Pratt, Capt. Peter G. Hale, Capt. H. G. Sanchez, Capt. Leroy Simpler, Comdr. W. E. Sweeney and Comdr. Harry Cross.

office one hour before he became President.

Vaughan helped me see the right people so I wouldn't be pushed around by clerks. Everybody does the same thing. If you want something, you ask someone like Vaughan or your Senator whom to see."

Got Him on Plane

Bennett insisted that the only favor Vaughan, the President's military aide, ever did for him directly was to get him aboard a plane from the Azores to the United States shortly after the war. He said he had been stricken ill and had to stop over in the Azores for a few days.

"He (Vaughan) helped me get on a bucket plane," said Bennett. "I was sick, but I slept on mail bags with the rest of them. There were four other passengers and it wasn't free. I paid and I paid plenty, don't think I didn't."

The Sentinel reporters said Bennett did not elaborate on his statement that he paid plenty for his air trip.

Testimony at the Senate inquiry into Washington's "influence industry" indicated that Vaughn had written letters of introduction for Bennett and some of his business associates, and had helped them get to Europe when plane space was tight.

Didn't Know Maragon Well

One of the business associates Vaughn aided was John Maragon.

Bennett said he didn't know Maragon very well when he hired him to get perfume oils abroad for the Verley firm. He did recall that Maragon — who once submitted a $9500 expense account for a European trip in behalf of Verley—charged "terrific" fees.

"But Maragon knows everybody in Washington," Bennett said.

Bennett dismissed the smuggling charges made against Maragon as something unworthy of a business executive who is in the highest income tax brackets. His implication was that if Maragon had smuggled in the perfume oils, it was without his knowledge.

"Why would I want to smuggle?" asked Bennett. "I'm in the 92 per cent bracket; why should I worry about a $2200 smuggling deal? Like those deep freezers—a couple of thousand dollars don't mean anything to me."

Freezers Were "Crappy"

Of the deep freezers that were sent to Vaughan and others, Bennett said, "they were crappy but they were the best available at the time."

He invited the Senate investigations subcommittee to come to Saugatuck to take his testimony, if necessary.

"I'll pay their expenses," he offered.

"That's all bunk about me being made sick by the investigation," the reporters quoted Bennett. "Hell, I've been sick since last spring."

The Sentinel story said Bennett had suffered three heart attacks since last spring and is recovering from a siege of virus pneumonia.

Discussing his forthcoming appearance before the investigators, Bennett said:

"I'm going to talk back just like (Planemaker Howard) Hughes did (in the 1947 war contract inquiry). He made them look like a bunch of monkeys."

Patterson Favors Union With Europe

St. Louis, Sept. 6 (AP).—A "genuine political and economic union" of the United States and Canada with western Europe was held out by Robert P. Patterson tonight as an assurance of peace "for the foreseeable future."

Patterson, former Secretary of War and now a New York lawyer, made the point in a speech prepared for the American Bar Association in convention here.

He said:

"The time is not far off, I hope, when the people of the United States and Canada will form a genuine political and economic union with the free people of western Europe. I do not minimize the obstacles that are presented. But such a union would assure peace for the foreseeable future, and it would rest on a common ground of freedom."

Earlier at a caucus of the association's house of delegates Harold J. Gallagher of New York was nominated to be president of the ABA for the coming year. The only nominee, he will be formally elected tomorrow.

The next ABA convention will be held in Washington, beginning September 18, 1950. About 4000 members of the association are attending the five-day convention here.

Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, in another address, blasted "false prophets" who criticize injustices in the United States while ignoring those which occur in "iron shroud" countries.

In this country, he declared, injustice is "headline news because it is the exception" while in the Soviet bloc nations "it is not news when an individual is deprived of life or liberty, or is imprisoned."

Vinson Urges Speed in Courts

He said injustice is not a novelty for Soviet-controled peoples but is "normal to their unhappy way of life."

Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice of the United States, another speaker, recalled the lines from Shakespeare's Hamlet about "the law's delay" as one of the "whips and scorns of time," and urged a businesslike conduct of the courts.

He told the assembled attorneys: "You must convince the bench, the bar and the legislature in your State that continuing improvement in court administration through adoption of businesslike methods is vital to public confidence in and respect for the courts."

Patterson, pointing a stern finger at Russia, said "their frenzied cries coming out of Moscow against Tito at present are ominously reminiscent of the shrill threats of Hitler against the Poles 10 years ago."

Against World Government

Still, he went on, the Atlantic Treaty is "plain notice to Moscow that the design characteristic of conquerors from Philip of Macedonia down to Hitler, the strategy of knocking victims off one by one, is no longer available."

Pataterson said: "I cannot go along with those who promote the notion of world government. They close their eyes to the fact that, of the two billion souls on the face of the earth, three-fourths live under the rule of absolute autocrats.

"Government by consent of the governed is not in their experience. Any government on a world-wide basis would not be a government of freedom; it would be simply a government by dictators."

A constitutional amendment to keep Senate ratification of treaties, as such, from having the force of law, was advocated tonight by Harold E. Stassen, former presidential aspirant and now head of the University of Pennsylvania.

man passes up arrest of a person he thinks is violating the law just because he does not have a warrant, he himself is violating the police manual and he may be passing up a real criminal.

"Of course I have been concerned about these cases that have been thrown out of court," Major Barrett said. "But even when we lose a case we can keep gambling down by bringing in gambling suspects."

"That harassment keeps gambling down," he said. "And who gets hurt? Only the numbers writer. Even if we lose him in court, at least we stick him for a lawyer's fee and a bondsman's fee. Publicity about cases being thrown out of court leads the gamblers to think they can get away with anything. It's quite a problem. Even if a man admits he writes numbers, if we arrest him without a warrant, we may lose him."

The man involved in yesterday's warrantless arrest was Albert T. Turner, 42, of 309 I st. se., and a cook at Stark's Restaurant, 1509 Benning rd. ne. He was released under $1500 bond for a court hearing this morning.

Vice Squad Chief Lt. Roy Blick gave this version of Turner's arrest. Early yesterday afternoon, two detectives entered a poolroom at 1511 Benning rd. ne., to "look around." They looked around through a window in the rear of the pool room across a courtyard into the kitchen of Stark's Restaurant.

There, Blick said, they saw a man later identified as Turner, allegedly writing numbers slips. Police crossed the courtyard, identified themselves and ordered Turner to open the window, Blick said. When Turner refused to admit the police and started tearing up the slips, Blick said his men opened the window and climbed into the restaurant. Turner started to run, Blick said, tearing the slips as he ran. He was caught at the corner of 15th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Barkley Denies Barring Press at Dance Date

St. Louis, Sept. 6 (AP).—Vice President Barkley and Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley went to a night club to dance tonight.

About 10 newsmen were on hand when the Barkley party arrived at the Starlight Roof of the Hotel Chase. Shortly afterward Harold Koplar, son of the hotel's owner, Sam Koplar, ordered the photographers and reporters out of the room.

Poplar told newsmen: "Unless you leave the Barkley party threatens to leave."

Barkley denied this.

"I never asked to have the press leave and they had no right to say I did."

Then Barkley and Mrs. Hadley went onto the floor to dance.

Britain's Financial Crisis: Meaning And Consequences

By Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
Former Secretary Of The Treasury

PART II

IN A preceding article I have indicated my view that the present inability of Great Britain, despite Marshall Plan aid, to obtain enough dollars to pay for current imports from the Western Hemisphere reflects not merely a temporary British problem but rather a fundamental maladjustment in economic relationship between the United States on the one hand and all of western Europe on the other.

The United States has developed such a phenomonally efficient productive machine that it dominates the markets of the world. It not only produces nearly all that its own people need but also a large surplus for export.

In western Europe and the rest of the world there is a terrific demand for the varied goods produced in America. The fact is that in the present circumstances the United States wants and needs little that western Europe and the rest of the world has to sell, and that western Europe and the rest of the world wants and needs much that the United States has to sell.

IN 1948, even though there existed in many parts of the world discriminatory controls and trade barriers designed to exclude American goods, the United States exports amounted, as I previously indicated, to 21 per cent of the total world exports. In the same year the United States' share of world imports was a mere 13 per cent of the total. Moreover, the United States imports amounted to only 3 per cent of our national income.

I have also indicated my view that while Britain and the rest of western Europe must redouble their efforts to increase productive efficiency, lower production costs and intensify their efforts to sell more goods for dollars in the United States, it is not possible in the forseeable future for them completely to close the gap between their dollar earnings and their dollar requirements for essential imports. Certainly, this cannot be accomplished without lowering the standard of living in these countries to a disastrous low level.

Price of Inaction

IT IS THUS apparent that we are grappling with an infinitely complex and difficult problem which cannot be solved by any magic formula or gadget and which will require years of intense study and action. The problem of making the necessary adjustments to the fundamental change which has occurred in economic relationships between the United States and western Europe obviously involves the most serious questions of national and international, political, economic and military policy in all of these countries. All of us clearly will have to reexamine many long-cherished concepts before we arrive at a solution.

What then, from the point of view of national self-interest, should be the position of the United States both with respect to the immediate crisis and the long-run problem?

It is not difficult to understand that, if the gold and dollar reserves of Britain and the other western European countries are permitted to be drained away so that they are unable to acquire currently needed food and raw material, serious economic and political collapse will be threatened in all of these countries. Any such collapse or economic deterioration would undoubtedly produce serious political, economic and military consequences affecting the United States.

IN OUR effort to establish a world of free and peaceful nations capable of withstanding the onslaught of communism, the United States has spent billions of dollars to enable western Europe to achieve such economic well-being as will permit them to work with us as partner in this battle for world peace. We have realized clearly that the kind of world we want cannot be achieved so long as these countries cannot provide an adequate standard of living for their people.

Having defeated Hitler in a bloody and costly effort we are now struggling against a new threat to world peace. After a great and painstaking effort, we have established a structure of political unity among ourselves and the nations of western Europe which has culminated in the Atlantic Pact. We are now taking steps to strengthen the military ties among us by a large program of military assistance to western Europe. We are considering an initial outlay for this purpose of as much as a billion and a half dollars.

The importance to the United States of strengthening these military and political bonds with western Europe is generally understood. But it must be apparent that if an economic collapse occurs in western Europe so that the standard of living is drastically reduced our whole effort in this regard will have been undermined. For countries which are not able to maintain a decent standard of living for their people cannot be, and may have little interest in being, effective political and military partners with us. In fact, if the United States were to stand aside and let western Europe fend for itself in dealing with this tremendous economic problem, we may even risk forcing them into close collaboration with the Soviet bloc.

U. S. Subsidy?

IN THESE circumstances it seems quite apparent that the United States in its own interest cannot permit the present British dollar crisis to go on unchecked. To do so is to threaten the whole Atlantic structure which we have been striving so hard to establish. The decision with which the United States is faced is not the simple one of whether we continue to give assistance to Britain. The fact is that, if we do not give such assistance, Britain will most likely be forced to reorient herself toward Russia and the Soviet bloc in the hope of getting some of the goods and materials from that area which she now gets from us.

Our failure to give assistance to Britain would, therefore, have the most serious economic, political and military repercussion for us. So difficult and complex is the long-run problem that there is no quick or easy answer which can now be suggested. However, the United States and the countries of western Europe must begin now to reexamine their present policies with a determination to find and make such adjustments as will contribute to a solution.

UNFORTUNATELY it is easier to have a more positive opinion as to what measures will not contribute to the solution of the problem than it is to suggest how the problem can be dealt with. Thus, for example, it is quite clear that it will be impossible in the foreseeable future for the United States to insist upon the convertibility of currencies and multilateral trade unless she is willing completely and indefinitely to subsidize these programs. This is an unfortunate fact, but a fact nevertheless.

Since western European nations cannot, as has been demonstrated, be expected under existing circumstances to earn enough dollars to pay for their own necessary dollar imports, they certainly will not have enough dollars to pay to their creditors. Moreover, in view of the magnetic attraction which American goods have for dollars throughout the world, insistence that western European nations not impose trade restrictions against American products can only lead to an intensification of their dollar crisis by increasing the discrepancy between United States exports and United States imports. I say this with full realization of the fact that if surpluses increase in the United States there will be considerable pressure to buy in the United States.

Controlled Trade

IN ORDER to maintain even the present position, it has been necessary for Britain and other western European nations to establish a network of bilateral trade agreements, import restrictions and other trade devices discriminating against American goods. In these circumstances and since the United States is unwilling to give a blank check on the American taxpayers to support indefinitely a system of multilateral trade and convertibility of currencies, it is time that we realize that it is futile for us to insist on the elimination of the bilateral and discriminatory trade systems which the western European countries are using to protect themselves.

Moreover, we must recognize that, much as we all dislike such a system, western Europe may have to maintain and even intensify the development of a controlled trading system for some years to come. It is our hope that eventually fundamental adjustments can be made which will permit the development of freer trade throughout the world. But our desire to achieve this goal must not lead us to intensify the existing problem.

CERTAIN other measures which have been mentioned as possible solutions of the problem should, I believe, be viewed most skeptically. The suggestion that the United States in present circumstances raise the price which it pays for gold not only is of no help in meeting the basic problem but may actually have harmful effects here and abroad. In essence this would be a method for the United States to give certain countries such as South Africa additional dollars which they undoubtedly need. But it is a most expensive and inefficient way to do so.

In the first place the diversion of economic effort from the production of essential goods and services to the mining of gold is economic waste which the world cannot afford. Moreover, a rise in the price of gold may quite possibly intensify the private hoarding of gold and gold speculation which already exists on a large scale in certain areas of the world today. To the extent that more gold is diverted from government to private hands, the ability of governments to meet their dollar needs will be decreased.

Devaluation Effect

I LIKEWISE view with serious doubt the wisdom of a devaluation of the pound at the present time. While I, of course, recognize the fact that it is sometimes necessary and proper to change the value of the curencies of one or more countries in order to achieve monetary stability, I think that it is not at all clear that this would be a helpful move in the present situation.

In view of the basic competitive disadvantage of British industry, I doubt that devaluation will have the desired effect of substantially increasing the sales of British goods in the United States. Moreover I fear that the devaluation of the pound will be followed by a series of unmanageable and uncontrollable competitive devaluations of other currencies which may adversely affect the economies of western Europe and the relationships among them and with the United States.

AN EQUALLY serious consequence may be a lowering of standards of living in Britain because of increased costs of British imports and a consequent rise of domestic prices. I believe that any further lowering of Britain's already drastically austere standard may well have the most serious effect on the will of the British people to continue to intensify their productive effort.

Furthermore, if the British government were unable to resist a demand for increased wages which certainly would follow an increase in domestic prices, Britain's ability to sell goods on a competitive basis with the United States would be seriously weakened. I am firmly convinced that it certainly would be most unwise to insist on devaluation over the objection of the British government which has the tremendous responsibility of the welfare of the British people.

Short-Term Help

FORTUNATELY, it is not nearly so difficult to find the means of meeting the immediate British crisis as it is to solve the long-term problem. As I have already suggested, the immediate British lack of dollars to buy necessary imports can be met in part by Britain's intensification of her own effort to sell more in the United States.

It is also important to keep in mind that there are agencies already in existence which might be able to grapple with this problem. For example, the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction have adequate funds which could be used for this purpose. I realize that at the present time both institutions are operating under administrative rules and interpretations which would make this difficult. But I believe that a fair appraisal of the nature of the crisis and the urgency of meeting it leads to the conclusion that these institutions possess adequate powers to enable them to grant the necessary aid to Britain.

SIMILARLY, I should hope that some way can be found by which funds appropriated by Congress for the acquisition of strategic materials may be used promptly in such manner as to assist Britain in its present crisis. Means should also be sought for increasing the amount of United States imports of raw materials such as rubber and tin from British dependencies. These few examples are cited merely to indicate that possibilities of meeting the immediate crisis can be found. And I am confident that once that urgency of the situation is realized, the United States Government will bend every effort to do so.

The important thing for all of us to understand is that the present British dollar crisis poses not merely an immediate emergency but also a long-run problem of the most complex character. We must, of course, find ways to meet the present crisis. But in dealing with it we must never lose sight of the basic problem with which we are concerned. While no immediate and final answers to the fundamental problem are now apparent to me, it seems clear that we must commence now the difficult task of searching for such solutions with all of the ingenuity and determination at our command.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Labor And The Farmer

THE EFFORT to weld farmer and city worker together within the framework of a re-created Democratic Party goes on apace. It has tremendous significance for the congressional campaign that will get going full blast just one year from now.

Childs

The AFL Labor's League for Political Education gave a Labor Day dinner in Chicago at which, for the first time, the leading speaker was not a union executive or even a man prominent in labor. The speaker was Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan. In his talk, broadcast over NBC, he argued the case for labor and farmer making common cause.

The league distributed 1300 copies of that speech to editors in Midwestern States. Joseph D. Keenan, director of the league, introduced Brannan on the Nation-wide hookup as "the man in American life who perhaps more than any other symbolizes this unity of industry, labor and the farmer." Another speaker at the dinner was Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, who has made an outstanding record in his first session in Congress.

In Pennsylvania's Twenty-sixth Congressional District, a special election next week will afford a test of the labor-farmer appeal. The Congressman from that district, Robert Lewis Coffey, jr., a 31-year-old Air Force veteran with a remarkable combat record, was killed in a jet plane crash. As a Reserve officer, Coffey was keeping up his flight training.

IN A traditionally Republican district, young Coffey, running as a Democrat for his first public office, defeated the Republican incumbent, Harve Tibbott, serving his fifth term. Because of Coffey's wide popular following and the sorrow felt at his death, Democratic leaders, cooperating with labor, agreed to name his mother, Mrs. Robert Lewis Coffey, sr., to run for the balance of the unexpired term.

Backing Mrs. Coffey with a realistic doorbell-ringing campaign are both the CIO and the AFL. Moreover, they are cooperating much more effectively than is the case in some areas.

The district is about half industry and half farm, and the appeal to unity of the two elements is important. The energetic campaigners for Mrs. Coffey are hopeful because of the large registration they have turned out.

But the Republicans are equally confident of winning back this seat. They seem anxious to make it a test, with Nation-wide attention, of the Truman Fair Deal.

Their candidate is John Saylor, a Navy veteran 41 years old, who is also a newcomer to politics. Saylor is making an intensive campaign of friendly, first-name greeting and hand shaking. His campaign manager says Saylor has shaken 26,000 hands by actual count. That is one in six of the voters in the district, and he will go on until he reaches his goal of one in five.

LABOR'S League is not advertising its activity in Pennsylvania. There is an increasingly sensitive reaction to the kind of news story that recounts the political power of labor and the millions—of men and money—in labor's political war chest.

Nevertheless, Keenan was remarkably frank in a transcribed broadcast carried Labor Day evening. Speaking of the attack by "reactionary newspapers" on Britain's Labor government, he said:

"The press campaign against Britain is not only endangering our fight against communism—it contains a threat against American workers that should be seriously considered on this Labor Day. A reduction in the standard of living does not solve any problems—as we found out in 1932 and 1933 . . . This anti-British campaign is a danger to both business and labor in this country. It is the same old argument that we not have an expanding economy—that we cannot afford old-age pensions, medical care or good housing."

Brannan declared in his prepared address that corporate profits after taxes last year were 4½ times the 1939 level. This is significant in view of the virtual certainty of a steel strike following the presidential fact-finding in which both sides fought over profits vs. wages. According to Brannan, total wages and salaries before taxes were only 2½ times as high as in 1939.

The Secretary concluded with a strong plea for his farm plan to "let prices seek their supply and demand level and compensate the farmer by a direct payment." In spite of repeated setbacks in Congress, it is increasingly clear that the Administration intends to make the Brannan plan the center of political strategy for '50 and perhaps for 1952.

Matter Of Fact

The Seamless Web

ECONOMIC complexities being what they are, it is very difficult to bring to life the crisis of British power which will occupy Snyder and Acheson, Bevin and Cripps, in Washington this week. Indeed, there is only one simple way to state the kind of problem that is involved. If the British crisis is not overcome, the process that left us expensively responsible for Greece and Turkey may shortly be repeated on an infinitely greater scale.

In brief, as everyone has been quite often and rather peevishly told, the drain on Britain's dollars is not in Britain alone. One of the most serious deficit areas is in the Far East. Before the war, India, Burma and Malaya used to earn a good many hundreds of millions of dollars a year for the London Exchequer, selling their raw materials to us, and buying British manufactured goods with our money. Now, however, all this is over.

Burma is in chaos and can no longer send rice to India. India is economically disrupted, can export less of her own raw materials, and must buy American grain to replace Burmese rice. Even Malaya, which continues to earn dollars for Britain by exports of rubber and tin, has been hard hit by the drop in commodity prices. In consequence, the net dollar deficit for the whole area of Burma, Malaya and India is upward of 200 million annually. This is the rate at which Britain is drawing down her last-ditch financial reserves for these three countries.

WHY, you may ask. The answer is, in part, that Britain lives by banking, and that, as members of the sterling area, Burma, Malaya and India are customers of the bank. But in American eyes, the more important part of the answer is poltical. A Communist guerilla movement in Malaya is requiring the attention of nearly 100,000 British and native troops. In Burma, the weak new government is menaced by two armed Communist rebellions and the tribal uprising of the Karens. And in India, the Communist Party, although still small, is rapidly making hay while the sun of disorder shines.

In other words, Britain is forced to pay out dollars to Burma, Malaya and India, or face the prospect of this vast, strategically crucial area being plunged, first, into total chaos, and later into communism. But suppose Britain's dollars run out. Then we shall have to take over Britain's rsponsibilities in India, Burma and Malaya, as we did in Greece and Turkey, or we must expect to see the completion of the job in Asia that our own folly in China has so well begun.

Nor can we complacently say to ourselves, "Oh, well, what does it matter if a few former British colonies go down the drain." While Burma, India and Malaya are going, Japan and the Philippines will be going, too. We shall be losing all the prizes of our bitter Pacific fighting. And we shall be confronted with a new factor in the balance of power—the raw material wealth of Asia, married to the industry of Japan and India, and controlled by the Kremlin. Such a convulsive change in the world power balance will inevitably produce a world situation worse than that after Munich.

SUCH IS the briefest and most informal summary of one of the American experts' studies of this Far Eastern problem, which is only one aspect of the much vaster problem that Secretaries Snyder and Acheson, Foreign Minister Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Cripps must somehow solve. The question remains, what is to be done about it?

As these words are written, the British proposals are not known. Bold ideas are current in London, but the indications from London suggest that the British leaders will not be bold. Most likely they will merely try to cut their Far Eastern deficit, by asking for an American guarantee to purchase Indian, Malayan and Burman raw materials at fixed prices in fixed amounts for a stated period.

Equally bold ideas are current in Washington, as has been recorded in this space; yet the political paralysis of the Administration is now so pervasive that the Americans may also be expected to avoid fundamental solutions. Stopgaps, tidevers and "committees-to-study" are the watchwords of the day.

Nonetheless, over the long term, stopgaps will not serve. As in the world, so in the Far East, boldness is the only one way out. Anyone who visits Asia, as one of these reporters has recently done, can see that American wealth and energy must be united with British experience and established influence in order to produce a firm Asiatic solution.

Only an Anglo-American political-economic-strategic organization wielding the largest powers, and disposing of very great resources, can halt the march of communism in Asia today. The creation of such an organization is already in the minds of some of the more far-sighted and vigorous American policy-makers.

One must hope that when the danger of timidity has been graphically proven, these men will have their innings, and that it will not be too late.

Belgium ERP Chief Gets German Posts

Robert M. Hanes, now chief of the Marshall Plan mission to Belgium, yesterday was designated Director of Economic Affairs for Germany and chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration mission at Frankfort.

Hanes will take over those posts from Norman H. Collisson, present economic director and mission chief. He will do so upon completion of the reorganization of the office of the United States high commissioner. He will work with Collisson until the transition is completed.

The ECA announced these other mission shifts:

John Nuveen, jr., now head of the ECA mission to Greece, will succeed Hanes in the Belgium-Luxembourg post.

Paul R. Porter, chief of the U. S. permanent delegation to the Economic Commission for Europe at Geneva, was named chief of the mission to Greece. He formerly was chief of the Mission for Economic Affairs at London.

ECA said the Hanes appointment was made with the concurrence of John J. McCloy, high commissioner for Germany.

Hanes is a North Carolina business executive, a director of several corporations, and president of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., Winston-Salem.

Porter, 41, was chairman of the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee of the War Production Board, and in 1945 became the U. S. member of the European Coal Organization. He has been alternate to W. Averell Harriman as U. S. representative to the Economic Commission for Europe.

Nuveen has been head of the Athens mission for a year.

The Gallup Poll

Arms Aid for Europe Favored By Weight of Voter Opinion

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 6.—As the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees plan to meet tomorrow in secret session on the Administration's $1,450,000,000 foreign arms bill, a Nation-wide survey of United States voters conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows the weight of public opinion today is in favor of the broad outlines of the Truman proposal.

The controversy thus far over the military assistance program has centered around two important questions—how much money, and does China get some of it?

Here is the way a cross section of voters questioned by the Institute feel about the issue:

"Do you approve or disapprove of President Truman's plan to send war materials and money to countries who want to build up their military defenses as a protection against Russia?"

Approve	46%
Disapprove	40
No Opinion	14

Today's figure of 46 per cent in favor of the arms bill compares with a vote of 67 per cent in favor of the Atlantic Pact as reported in July before Senate ratification.

Greatest approval of the President's plan comes from voters who have had the most formal education. Here is the vote by degree of education of the voter:

	Approve	Disapprove	No opin.
College	53%	38%	9%
High school	47	41	12
Grade school	42	41	17

Democrats are substantially in favor of the plan. Among Republican voters, sentiment was much more closely divided, with more disapproving the issue than approving it. Voters who classify themselves as independents politically lean toward the Democratic side. Here is the vote by parties:

	Approve	Disapprove	No opin.
Democrats	50%	35%	15%
Republicans	42	46	12
Independents	44	41	15

One of the most interesting aspects of today's survey is the relatively high approval of the plan from Southern voters. Least support is found in the Western States as shown in the following table:

	Approve	Disapprove	No opin.
New England and Middle Atlantic	46%	40%	14%
East North Central	45	42	13
Central	41	44	15
South	57	27	16
Far West	40	46	14

Bus Aides to Vote On Strike End Plea

Striking AFL employes of the W. B. & W. bus line were to meet in closed session at 2 a.m. this morning to vote on a proposal for settling the long dispute.

Some 400 drivers and maintenance men have been on strike against the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. since July 21, but remained at their posts when the State of Virginia took over operation of the company pending settlement of the controversy.

Federal Conciliator Gilbert McCutcheon and State Labor Commissioner Edward M. Boggs brought the negotiator for the company and union—Division 1131, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America—together last Tuesday for the first time since the strike and seizure.

The union had asked for 30 cents an hour increase in pay and other benefits. Under terms of the expired work contract drivers get $1.35 an hour, maintenance men $1.45.

2 Arraigned In Break-In

At least one of the tangled affairs of Samuel Ochs, 42, a Georgetown business man, was partially unsnarled yesterday. Two men were arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence in connection with the $2000 housebreaking at Ochs' store an hour before a two-alarm fire partially destroyed it on August 10.

The two are George Howard Brown, 18, of 1029 30th st. nw., and Pvt. Conley W. Alexander, 26. The latter was turned over to police by authorities at Fort McNair where he was held for being absent without leave from Camp Lee, Va.

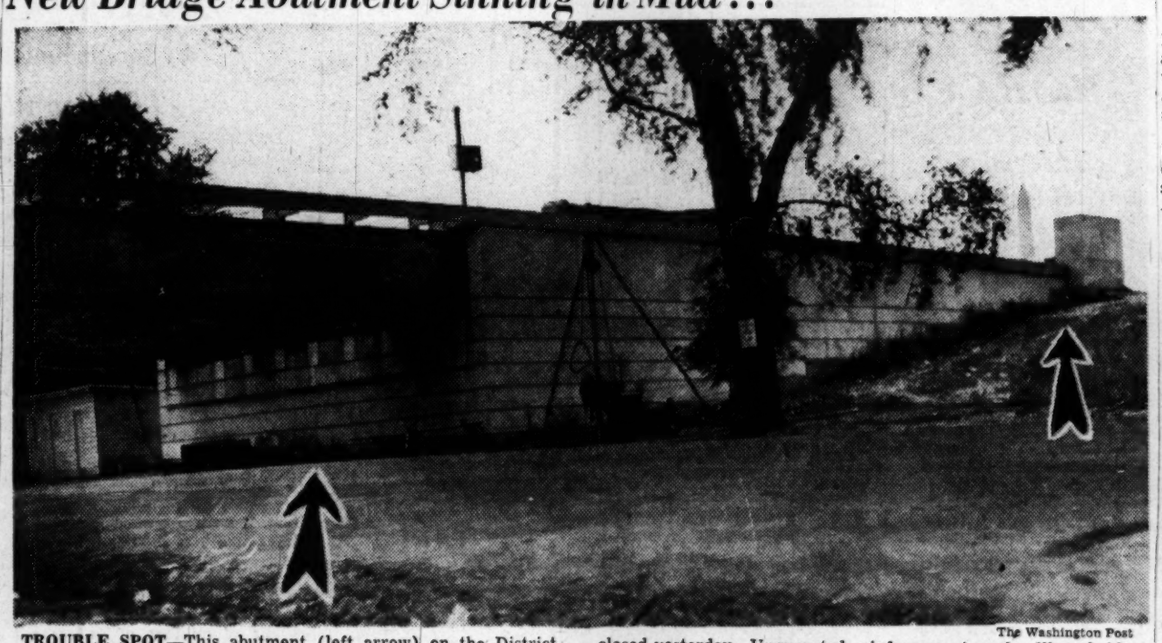
At the arraignment Ochs refused to comment on Prince Georges County charges that early on August 26, he shot and wounded Bernard (Yorkie) Del Negro, an indicted gambler. The shooting took place outside the Crossroads night club in Bladensburg. Ochs still wore a black eye he admitted receiving it the night of the shooting.

Police arrested Brown Monday night when he appeared to inquire about an auto, registered in Alexander's name, which had been picked up by police for displaying expired dealer's plates. In subsequent questioning, police said, he admitted the break-in at Ochs' store, the Sam-Jack clothing store, 3145 M st. nw.

Detectives Keith Gosman and William W. Friel said Brown admitted chiding Alexander afterward about the fire, and Alexander told him, he said, that it must have started from a cigarette.

Police said they learned Alexander was AWOL at the time of the burglary and fire. Detectives said he denied any part in the theft or fire.

New Bridge Abutment Sinking in Mud...



The Washington Post

TROUBLE SPOT—This abutment (left arrow) on the District approach to the new Highway Bridge over the Potomac has sunk 2 inches into soggy earth and is still going down, officials disclosed yesterday. Unexpected reinforcement work will probably cost an additional $150,000, it was said surface approach (arrow, right) settled a foot and a half driven down to rock bottom under the approach.

"Under ideal conditions," Young wrote Warren, "this work could be completed in about six weeks." He added that preparation of plans for the work will require three weeks, and "it is imperative that work be commenced earlier."

Army Engineers Differ

Young specifically requested a change order in the contract to go ahead with the reinforcement to avoid the routine of advertising for bids which he said would cause an eight-weeks' delay.

Soil experts of the Bureau of Public Roads have advised the Commissioners to bolster the approaches without delay. BPR will pay the other half of the cost.

But the Army Engineers, who were called in on a consulting basis, took the position that the bridge approaches probably would not sag much more, and would not cause any later trouble.

In the face of conflicting advice, the Commissioners have decided to call in a top soil man at Harvard University before making a final decision on their bridge problem.

Robber Posed As Detective, Hotel Charges

A man who identified himself as a detective and a red-haired woman supposed to be his wife were sought by police last night for robbery.

Donald F. Quinn, 29, night clerk at the Emery Hotel, 1812 G st. nw., said the couple registered five days ago as "Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Toneman" of New York, and the map showed him an identification card as a house detective in a New York hotel.

At 2:20 a. m., Quinn told officers, Toneman summoned him to their fourth-floor room on the pretext that his wife was ill and needed to get to a hospital. When he arrived, Quinn said, she was groaning realistically. But when Toneman produced a .45-caliber automatic pistol and pointed it at Quinn, she revived quickly.

She held the gun, Quinn said, while Toneman bound him with adhesive tape and a light cord, and thrust him into a closet.

In the hotel office, Quinn said, the pair took $40 in cash, their original registration card, and a typewriter Toneman had left as security for a loan from the hotel.

As a final touch, Quinn said, Toneman upbraided another guest for being "drunk in the lobby" and ordered him to his room. When the guest questioned his authority, Quinn said, Toneman again produced the "detective" identification. Quinn worked loose after 10 minutes and called police.

Private Admits Hitting Officer Found Slain

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A 26-year-old private from New York told his commanding officer today that he beat an officer for making advances to his girl friend, but he didn't know he had killed him until the victim's picture appeared in a newspaper.

Pvt. Charles E. Meloche faced a murder charge after he cleared up the mystery surrounding the death of Lieut. Edward L. Helmstetter, 27, by reporting to the Fort Bliss post commander, Maj. Gen. John L. Homer. Both men were stationed at Fort Bliss.

Meloche said he struck the officer twice with his fists early Sunday when Helmstetter accosted him and his girl as he was walking her home from a date.

Helmstetter's body, in civilian clothes, was found in a residential driveway Sunday morning by a policeman. The jaw was broken loose from the skull, which was fractured.

"As he reached for my date, I hit him with all I had," the soldier said. "I hit as hard as I could because I didn't want to fight any more than I had to. I figured I had just knocked him unconscious."

Meloche was turned over to the custody of the Army, pending action of the grand jury, following an inquest set for Friday.

2 Sailors Trying For Reveille Held In Auto Theft

Police yesterday arrested two sailors who, police said, had stolen an automobile to get back to their Navy base in time for reveille.

The youths were arrested by Washington police when they attempted to sell an outboard motor reportedly stolen from an officer at Patuxent Naval Air Station.

Police said the sailors, Charles W. Welcome, 19, and a 17-year-old juvenile companion, admitted trying to sell the outboard motor they found in the trunk of the car to buy gasoline.

The car, police said, belonged to Robert E. Dirks, 3101 Pennsylvania ave. se. The outboard motor belonged to an officer friend of Dirks.

Cleveland Asked To Ban Air Races

Housewife Killed By Odom's Plane

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MRS. JEANNE LAIRD, 24, was killed, as was her year-old son, Craig, when Bill Odom's plane ripped through their house at Berea, Ohio, and set it afire. The crash and death of the famed distance pilot threaten discontinuance or shifting of the annual Thompson Trophy race at Cleveland

Cleveland, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Enraged citizens threatened today to bring a halt to high-speed closed course events at the National Air Races, but officials were hopeful "sentiment will cool off."

It seemed certain that for such races, at least for Cleveland, the end was in the flaming wreckage of Bill Odom's $100,000 speed plane, which crashed into a house yesterday killing Odom, a young housewife, and her baby son.

Race officials, subjected to mounting protests, discussed the probability of moving the races to Los Angeles, Detroit or Chicago after 12 years in Cleveland.

Ben Franklin, manager of the races, said: "We are hoping the sentiment against the races will subside, and that we may able to continue here. All we can do now is wait.

"But we are prepared to take the races elsewhere if necessary. And we may decide to cut them to two days."

However, Franklin added that wherever the races were held, the Thompson event would be run the same as it was yesterday. At a meeting of pilots today, they approved the $40,000 speed race layout.

In suburban Berea, where the crash occurred, the Citizens Progressive League circulated petitions demanding enforcement of laws prohibiting closed course races over heavily populated areas.

Odom died in the Thompson Trophy Race when his F-51, flying low, went out of control rounding a pylon near Berea. It crashed into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley C. Laird. Mrs. Laird, 24, was killed instantly, and her baby son died four hours later from burns.

Other pilots in the Thompson event and race officials agreed that "pilot error" was the cause of Odom's crash. They said Odom, a novice at pylon flying, swung too wide on the No. 2 pylon, then attempted to swing back to correct his error.

Air race officials said they have a five-million-dollar policy with Lloyds of London which will cover the Laird family.

But to Laird, 36, that was small compensation for losing his wife and baby.

Dairy Loses Court Plea

When the OPA passed from existence so did the protection afforded by the so-called OPA "escalator clause," the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The Appeals Court upheld a District Court ruling denying the Wakefield Dairy an additional $4485 from the District government for milk supplied public institutions here in 1946.

The contract between Wakefield and the District, embodying the clause permitting an upward adjustment of prices if the OPA put up price ceilings, was prepared while the OPA still existed. But the contract was carried out after the expiration of the OPA on June 30, 1946.

Through Attornye John F. Hillyard, the Wakefield Dairy contended that although OPA died, its functions were carried on by the Price Decontrol Board and the Department of Agriculture as the "successors" of OPA.

The Court of Appeals held unanimously that this contention was "unsupported by either reason or authority."

This was said to be the first time a United States Court of Appeals has ruled on the OPA "escalator clause." The ruling will affect similar claims of other dairies against the District.

All Companies Pay Pensions, But Some Don't Ever Know It

By J. A. Livingston

"IN MY book," said Grandpa, "this drive of Philip Murray for a pension plan for his steelworkers is irresistible. Too many big companies, like American Telephone, Eastman Kodak, most of the leading oil companies, Columbia Broadcasting, General Foods, already have pension plans.

"Besides, when John L. Lewis made front-page headlines with his coal royalties—first a nickel, then a dime, and now 20 cents a ton—he made workers all over the country conscious of pension plans. Lewis wasn't first, but he was the noisiest and he put Murray and Walter Reuther on the spot. They have to get as much as Lewis or the members of the union figure they're not as good.

Livingston

"Then," continued Grandpa, "there's Social Security itself. When Congress passed the Social Security Act it recognized the need of protecting people in their old age. Only Congress didn't figure on war and inflation. In 1935, when the act was passed, the average weekly wage was $20 and the dollar was worth a dollar at the A & P and Gimbel's. But today factory workers earn $50 a week and the dollar is worth only 59 cents at the retail counter. So ideas of an adequate pension have changed. Can a man with two dependents get along these days on the Social Security maximum of $85 a month?"

GRANDPA gestured toward his empty glass. I refueled him and he went on: "You know all companies pay pensions, only some of them don't know it."

Grandpa then pointed to his foreshortened index finger. "I worked in a factory once. I was young then. Lost the tip of my finger—in a machine—through carelessness. An old fellow was the first man to get to me. Gave me a slug of whisky, administered first aid.

"He was just one of several old codgers around. I wondered why the foreman kept 'em on. They didn't do much. One day, I asked. Well, all of them had been there for years—at one job or another. They'd trained most of the people in the shop. None of them had saved much. So nobody around the place would think of turning them out to the poorhouse. The foreman, the workers, just protected them. These old gaffers were pensioners on the payroll. And if the people in the shop don't protect the old guys, union seniority rules do. I understood too. Do you think if I had to be foreman, I'd ever fire the fellow who gave me that whisky? No sir! Not unless he had a pension!

"What happens in the plant takes place in the paneled offices too. When a vice president gets too old, his fellow officials aren't going to say to him, 'Look, Ed, don't you think you'd better retire for the sake of the company?' No sir! All the executive instincts are to keep their fellow executive in the country-club set. Each one thinks, 'I might be in Ed's shoes.' Yet often, because Ed stays on the job in a top position, he may make decisions that cost money—big money."

GRANDPA LOOKED at me dubiously. "I don't suppose you know W. T. Holliday. No, you're too young. He's chairman of Standard Oil of Ohio. Well, he says that a pension plan is 'not a benevolence; it is strictly a business proposition. As a corporation gets older the obsolescence of its manpower becomes increasingly embarrassing unless reserves have been set up to meet it.'

"That puts it just the way I'd put it," declared Grandpa, with the expression of a man bestowing the Nobel Prize, the Congressional Medal of Honor, and an honorary degree from Harvard all at once. "In this country accountants always set up depreciation reserves to retire old and purchase new machinery. Well, if executives did the same for themselves and their employes we'd have more efficient companies. You'd get rid of high-cost, unplanned pension plans.

"Old men in the factories would get out so young men could operate their machines. Old men at executive desks would move out so that younger ones, who aren't set on outmoded ideas, could be promoted."

Grandpa started to say something, reconsidered, then declared: "Pensions are too big a subject for one night. We'll talk some more about them some other time." With that, Grandpa finished off his drink and went upstairs. He honestly thought I'd taken part in the discussion.

Reds' General Strike Falls Flat in Milan

Milan, Itlay, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The Communist general strike, designed to paralyze this industrial city for three hours, fell at today.

day.

In downtown Milan there was almost no sign of a strike as thousands of workers defied the order, aftermath of a gun battle between police and Communists in which three persons, including one policeman, was slain and 12 were wounded.

Unused Gas Tank Explodes, Causing Bang But No Injuries

Seven fire-engine companies and four rescue squads from communities in Prince Georges County were dispatched yesterday when residue gases and oil in a gas-holder tank exploded and blazed up. However, the blaze was not serious.

The gas-holder, no longer used by the Washington Gas Light Co., is in the 4800 block of Tanglewood dr., Bladensburg. It is being dismantled.

Eric Gaardsmoe, 30, of 27 7th st. se., of the American Steeplejack Service, was on a steel framework about 100 feet up from the ground, firemen said, when a spark from his acetylene-burning torch apparently set off the explosion and blaze in the bed of the tank below.

He walked along a beam 30 feet to a ladder and descended uninjured.

Lawrence A. Watson, 46, superintendent of machinery for the Hyattsville Fire Department, was blown under a truck by a stream of water with 120 pounds of pressure, when a hose broke. He was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital for cuts and bruises, and released.

'Mr. X' Proves Real Benefactor to Veterans

Newark, N. J., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A hundred war veterans' wives learned today that the mysterious "Mr. X" who had spent large sums of money buying huge homes and converting them into apartments for veterans with large families had willed the apartments to them.

They found out about their windfall when the will of Wilbur B. Driver, East Orange, N. J., industrialist, was filed.

The executors could place no value on the property, but said it would run into many thousands of dollars.

Tuxedo Permit Issued

The Prince Georges County Commissioners, meeting at Marlboro, yesterday overruled an objection by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to construction of a proposed dry cleaning plant at Tuxedo, Md. The permit was subsequently issued to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Johnson, of Annapolis, Md., who propose to build the plant.

Income Tax Evader Freed on Parole

Henry Lustig, former president of the Longchamps Restaurant chain in New York City, was paroled yesterday from the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Since October 29, 1947, he has been serving a four-year term on conviction of evading income taxes.

The Government alleged that during the period 1940-44, Lustig understated his income by $3,450,000 and evaded $2,870,000 in taxes.

In addition to receiving a prison term, he was fined $115,000. The fine was paid.

The parole board, in disclosing his release, said he became eligible for parole last February. A parole was denied at that time. Lustig was given his freedom effective yesterday upon reconsideration of the application.

Getting Oil in Jungle Country...

IT'S A BIG AMERICAN JOB!

All the world needs oil. And to meet its needs the world has depended greatly upon the American oil industry... More and more, oil is being developed abroad by Americans for use abroad.

It is a big job, requiring big enterprise. Oil must be found in jungles and deserts, under seas and in rugged mountains. Years of work and millions of dollars must be spent before new oil supplies become available in useful quantities.

And the coming of American methods to these far places brings better living to the people there. It brings new enterprise and new work, modern living quarters, schools, hospitals. Air-conditioning comes to people in the desert. Malaria control comes to fever-ridden jungles.

Almost half the efforts of Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) and its affiliates go into developing and supplying oil abroad. Meeting these needs calls for big plans, big investments.

But it is a job we know how to do, and doing it helps human progress.

The better you live, the more oil you use...

Two Jockeys Barred in Maryland Probe of 'Fixes'

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

New York, Sept. 6.—In the American League, this is it—the blue-chip series commencing tomorrow night in Yankee Stadium where the lead-hungry Red Sox collide with the Yankees, and you'd have to say they're a pair of desperate ball clubs.

For both teams the upcoming three-game engagement is loaded with importance. For the Yankees is could mean laying the haunt of the Red Sox who are beginning to crowd the Yanks again, two months after they supposedly were laid waste by five straight New York victories in Fenway Park.

POVICH

But like phoenix from the ashes, the Red Sox have risen anew and are driving hard at their Yankee tormentors whose league lead they have reduced to a mere game and a half. They could walk out of Yankee Stadium Friday evening as top team in the pennant race which since opening day has known no leader save the Yankees.

That would require three straight Red Sox victories over the Yanks, and that ranks among the improbabilities. But two out of three would reinstate the Red Sox as a new threat to take it all, and under the circumstances the Yankees' loss of two games to the Boston club would put a foreboding face on the remainder of the pennant race for Casey Stengel's club.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES are not in the Yankees' favor. They are a wounded ball club with the year's most crucial series at hand, in contrast to the robust Red Sox who have been inguularly free of injuries all year. Tommy Henrich is sweating it out in a steel corset designed for fractured vertebrae, and the Red Sox are delivered also from the menace of Yogi Berra's bat as well, with Berra nursing his injured hand.

Joe Di Maggio will be in the Yankee lineup, but not at his best. Di Maggio's celebrated sore heel not only has been kicking up a fuss again, but he was compelled to retire from Monday's games with an attack of leg cramps. Johnny Mize and his big bat are also out of the Yankee lineup, with Mize a shoulder case. The Red Sox never had it better.

Stengel has been patching furiously. His most recent maneuver was to sign huge Hugh Casey, released as a relief pitcher weeks ago by the Pirates. Since calling up Fenton Mole from Newark as a first-base fill-in, Stengel has also drafted from the Yanks' Kansas City farm Joe Collins, another first baseman. He is the fifth first-sacker to grace the Yankees' lineup this year and a whole volume could be written about Stengel's first base problems of 1948.

ALL SEASON, though, the Yankees have been a team of grit. If they win the pennant, it will be clear why. They have been macerating the Red Sox since the start of the season, with 10 victories in the 15 games between the two clubs. Even during a period when Vic Raschi bogged down and didn't last out a game for weeks, they clung to the lead.

For the first time in years, the Yankees are sentimental favorites in a pennant race. Their ability to rise above crippling blows to Di Maggio, Henrich and Berra has not been lost on the nation's fans. Casey Stengel has qualified at once as inspirational leader, master juggler and practitioner of the Hindu rope trick in his ability to keep the Yankees up there without visible means of support.

When Di Maggio retired from the Yankees' lineup in Philadelphia yesterday after one inning of the second game, Stengel couldn't point to a single .300 hitter on his ball club. Only one man was batting more than .282, in fact. Yet the Yanks swept the pair of games. Of this Yankee club, it is being said in New York that Yankee fans were never so charmed by any other team in Yankee livery.

THE RED SOX will move into the Stadium for tomorrow night's series opener flourishing a five-game winning streak. Joe McCarthy, like Stengel, played his pitchers coyly in the Labor Day doubleheaders. Stengel maneuvered it to have both Raschi and Tommy Byrne available for duty against Boston. McCarthy pitched Mel Parnell, 21-game winner, against Washington and thus will have him ready with three days rest for the Yankee finale.

In contrast to the Yankees, McCarthy's batting order is loaded with dynamite. Four of the Red Sox, led by Ted Williams and Dom Di Maggio, are hitting far in excess of .300. McCarthy will put a completely healthy club on the field. The Red Sox will have no excuses. They haven't had any all season, in fact, save their bungling in the big series.

In a couple of National League sectors, Brooklyn and St. Louis, there will be undisguised rooting for the Yankees to slap the Red Sox down with finality. Cardinal and Dodger players would like to meet the Yankees, not the Red Sox, in the World Series. The profit motive is strong. They'd like World Series checks based on the 70,000 seating capacity of Yankee Stadium, not the 34,000 seats in Fenway Park.

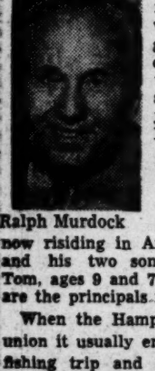
3 Generations of Men Folks Enjoy Fishing at Same Time

By Ralph Murdock

HERE'S EVIDENCE that fishing has a definite tendency to draw the family closer together. You will have to travel a long way to find a recreation where three generations can indulge in the same sport and enjoy it, George Hamp, senior and his wife, Dolly, from Decatur, Ill.; their son, George, jr., now risiding in Arlington, Va., and his two sons, Mike and Tom, ages 9 and 7 respectively, are the principals referred to.



Ralph Murdock

When the Hamps have a reunion it usually ends up with a fishing trip and last weekend was no exception. The quintet procured an inboard motor boat from Deep Creek Farm and fished in the upper bay.

George junior said, "We only caught 25 spots, but dad, mom and my two boys love fishing. It was a grand get-together for us and we had a swell time."

HAVE YOU ever heard of the "Fishing Hanfords?" Let's meet 'em. They are Mr. and Mrs. Farrell Hanford and their son, Bob, age 16.

Instead of spending a lot of time going to and from the fishing grounds, the Hanfords settled at North Beach.

They make a mad dash for the fishing boat and in a jiffy they are all set for action. Their last "call to arms" resulted in a catch of 18 blues, 2 rock and 2 flounders.

A PARTY comprising Charles Hughes, Blick McCollier, Joe Winstead, Jay Nash, Curtis Applegate, Sonny Reece, age 15, and Bob Hill, the same age, decided to take a fling at the bluefish. They trolled out of Ridge, Md., with Capt. Taft Tippett doing the guiding. The blues were contacted off Point Lookout and 119 of the gamesters were landed. They also picked up 7 pan-size rockfish which were feeding with the bluefish. The boat was the Bay Queen.

Fishing, like all sports, requires a certain element of luck. We have in mind a couple of very prominent Washingtonians who have the patience, perseverance and all the requisites that make good anglers but after several unsuccessful attempts they have yet to catch their first fish. They are Dr. Francis Xavier Richardson, physician, and Elmore Francis St. Clair, entomologist at the Department of Agriculture.

A STRONG SOUTHEASTER upset the applecart for most of the angling enthusiasts who braved the choppy Chesapeake waters on Sunday afternoon. This party was no exception and it included Jack Dolton his wife Judy; Ruby Taylor, Hookem Touchton, his wife, Irene; Sam Sutton, Raymond Cox and the writer. A pool for the first fish was won by Irene Touchton. It was an 8½-inch flounder. The total catch was 4 rockfish, 2 trout and 1 flounder.

Caps Land McKinney on Two Special Concessions

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Swayed by two of the most unusual concessions ever made any athlete, Bones McKinney has definitely decided to play basketball with the Washington Caps in the approaching season.

To lure the skinny North Carolina court clown back to Washington, Mike Uline owner of the Caps, has agreed to:

1. Permit McKinney to miss the Caps' game in Denver;

2. Play an exhibition basketball game in Raleigh, N. C., Bones' home town, between the Caps and a Carolina All-Star team with proceeds going to McKinney.

Dislikes Air Travel

The first compromise, permitting McKinney to remain in Washington while the team plays in Denver, is a concession to Bones' refusal to travel by air.

The second is the answer to Bones' demands for a salary raise over last year's pay, estimated at $8,000.

Bones decision to play a fourth year with Washington's Eastern Division champs is a complete reversal of the stand he took at the end of the last season when he said he was through with pro ball.

Planned to Study

At the time, he said he would re-enter North Carolina University and complete work toward a degree in physical education. He also said he would coach a Carolina semipro basketball team.

Regardless of how the Caps managed to get him back, the return of McKinney is a 10-strike for them. Without the great rebounder, they'd simply be lost.

While the Caps have settled the McKinney affair, they now must worry about signing Sonny Hertzberg, their back-court star. Sonny has rejected two contracts and walked out of a four-hour session with Uline still unsigned.

Norlander Signed To Capitol Contract

John Norlander, popular 27-year-old forward of the Washington Capitols from Virginia, Minn., yesterday became the ninth member of the Washington Capitols either to sign or agree to terms for the National Basketball Association season.

Norlander, 6 feet 2½ inches and 180 pounds, will open his fourth campaign with the Caps. He is one of the original players signed when they entered the Basketball Association of America in 1946-47.

Entries Swell For Regatta

By Happy Walker

The President's Cup Association was assured yesterday at the final regular luncheon meeting before the Potomac River classic is held that a larger field than last year will compete for trophies in the sailing events.

The report came from Bill Heintz, sailing chairman, who told association members that the sailing race schedule on September 24 and 25 will feature 10 classes and will have several hundred entries, a decided increase over 1948.

The power boat races will be contested September 17-18 and Eric Greenleaf, general chairman, announced entries are on hand for several gold cuppers, including Jack Shafer, Guy Lombardi and others.

A highlight of the luncheon was the reception given Carlton Skinner, recently named governor of Guam. Skinner, who relinquished his committee chairmanship to Heintz, is one of Washington's outstanding sailors, having raced just about every class there is, from 20-footers to Joseph Davies' barque, Sea Cloud.

Walker Pays To Flout Ump

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6 (AP).—Dixie Walker's 11-year burn at Umpire Larry Goetz cost him $100 and a three-day suspension today but Dixie figured he got a bargain.

"I waited 11 years to tell Goetz off and believe me it was worth the money," the 39-year-old Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder declared.

National League President Ford Frick levied the fine and suspension for Walker's altercation yesterday with Goetz in St. Louis.

Goetz tossed Dixie out of the second St. Louis-Pittsburgh game in the tenth inning, accusing him of stretching across the plate while being given an intentional pass.

L. A. Rams Beat Bulldogs, 21-14

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 6 (AP).—Tommy Kalmanir, rookie halfback from Nevada, and the veteran Bob Waterfield paced the Los Angeles Rams to a 21 to 14 victory over the New York Bulldogs in an exhibition professional football game last night.

Doris Hart, Shirley Fry Win Wightman Berth

Philadelphia, Sept. 6. (AP)—Doris Hart, Jacksonville, Fla., and Shirley Fry, Akron, Ohio, clinched the No. 2 doubles spot on the U. S. Wightman Cup tennis team today.

They defeated Mrs. Pat Cunning Todd and Gussie Moran, both of California, in a test match 6-4, 6-3.

Braves Bow, 10-2

Dodgers Cut Cards' Lead To One Game

Brooklyn, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers surged to within a game of the front-running St. Louis Cardinals tonight as Don Newcombe hurled a 10-2 triumph over the Boston Braves. Newcombe checked the Braves on six hits in posting his fifteenth triumph.

The victory was the Dodgers' thirteenth in their last 17 games, and the seventh straight loss for the Braves. Newcombe's consecutive scoreless inning string was snapped at 31 when the Braves tallied in the second inning.

Brough-Sturgess Team Wins U. S. Mixed Doubles

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 6 (AP). Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Eric Sturgess of South Africa won the mixed doubles title today as the national tennis championships came to a belated end.

They defeated Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont of Wilmington, Del., and Billy Talbert of New York, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5, in a final postponed from yesterday because of darkness.

It was the fourth time Miss Brough had shared the mixed doubles crown. She won with Ted Schroeder in 1942, with John Bromwich in 1947 and with Tom Brown in 1948. Mrs. duPont and Talbert held the title for four years, from 1943 through 1946.

Toledo Hurler Gives Town 1st No-Hitter

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 6 (AP).—Bill Connelly, erratic Toledo right-hander, hurled a no-hit, no-run game tonight as the last place Mudhens defeated the Louisville Coloniels, 5 to 0, in an American Association contest.

He was the first Mudhen pitcher to accomplish the feat in a nine-inning game in the 40-year history of Swayne Field.

Tatum Expects Everybody in Terps' Speedy Backfield to Chuck Passes This Season

By The Associated Press

THE EMPHASIS is going to be on youth and speed on the University of Maryland football team this season.

"It's the first time in the three years I've been here that we've got the speed to operate the split T formation right," beams Coach Jim Tatum.

"Last year (won six, lost four) our greatest weaknesses were lack of speed and a passing attack," continues Jim. "This season we expect that to be corrected."

Who's going to do the passing?" Just about every back who will play." Tatum replies impartially. The same goes for the speed supply.

Offensively speaking, the 22 sophomores on a squad of 62 are due to take the Maryland spotlight. (There are only eight seniors on the squad which makes 1950 a season for which Tatum "can hardly wait.")

The most talked-of newcomer is Ed (Mighty Moe) Modzelewski. A 205-pound fullback from Harbrack, Pa., Coach Tatum freely predicts Moe is going to be the best runner in the Southern Conference.

Moe, besides running like a wild bull, also can pass and is being taught to kick to make him a triple threat.

As a complement to Moe's charges, Buck Earley of Hagerstown, Md., is being groomed as a scat back. Early is a speedy 162-pounder and in case he falters 160-pound Bob (Shoo Shoo) Shemonski of Archbald, Pa., is ready to take over the lightning job.

Early and Shemonski are making two of last year's speedsters, Johnny Idzik and Vern Seibert, take reserve roles at left half. Moe is forcing to the bench such letter winners as Bob Roulette, Earl Roth and Jack Targarona.

At the other half, sophomore Tom Luizzi from Nutley, N. J., and Lyn Davis of Baltimore, are battling veterans Joe Kuchta and Jim La Rue.

The key spot of quarterback is going to be left in the hands of veterans Joe Tucker of Arlington, Va. and Stan Lavine of Pittsburgh. At the moment, Lavine has the edge.

Maryland will use the two-team system. On offense, sophomores will be in the majority. Defensively, it will be a veteran outfit.

Without the ball, Maryland will line up with Elmer Wingate and Capt. Fred Davis at ends, Ray Krouse and Chet Gierula, tackles; Bob Ward and John Troha, guards, and either Jim Brasher or Jake Rowden at center.

"We ought to be tough to score on," figures Coach Tatum, "with that line."

The 230-pound Krouse, playing his third year, is the strong man of the forward wall. Maryland is touting him for "all" honors.

While 28 of the squad already have earned letters, Tatum shows how well he regards his new material by saying "it's the first time at Maryland that I can truthfully say there is competition for every position."

Nats and A's Meet Tonight

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—The last-place Nats face the fifth-place Philadelphia Athletics tomorrow night in the opener of a two-game series.

Two highly prized rookie pitchers, who have had directly opposite luck in their first season, will be on the mound.

For Washington it will be Dick Weik, righthanded fastballer, who has been brilliant when he wasn't affected by wildness. He has lost nine straight decisions, and for the year has a 1-10 record.

For the A's, Alex Kellner will do the pitching. The big lefty has a 16-12 record, but in his last outing against the Nats he was spanked, 8-7.

Quantico Leaves For Honolulu to Defend Title

The Quantico Marine baseball team, two-time All-Navy titlist, left Anacostia 10 p. m. last night in a transport plane bound for Honolulu.

Quantico defends its baseball crown against Submarine Forces, Pacific, in a five-game series starting September 12 in Honolulu Stadium.

The Marines, so far, have an 89-17 .840 record. They lost only two games all year to service clubs. Quantico personnel, led by Maj. Gen. Lemuel Sheperd, commanding general held a send-off rally yesterday at the base.

Giants Snap Phils' Streak

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—The New York Giants severed a seven-game Philadelphia winning streak today, clipping the Phils, 4-1, in the second half of a twinbill after the Phils grabbed the 10-inning opener, 4-2.

Sheldon Jones bested Hank Borowy in the finale, yielding six hits to the five the Giants collected. Bill Nicholson homered for the only Philadelphia run in the fifth inning.

Wes Westrum, Jones' battery mate, won the game with a three-run homer in the sixth inning. The blow snapped a 1-1 tie.

Stagg Starts Sixtieth Season

Selinsgrove, Pa., Sept. 6 (AP).—Amos Alonzo Stagg, football's grand old man, opened his sixtieth gridiron campaign today at Susquehanna University by leading 22 players in a sprint down the field.

Stagg, who observed his eighty-seventh birthday last August 16, was bouncing with enthusiasm about getting back to work at the game he loves so well. He has no thought of retiring and expects to be coaching when he's 90.

—But They Won't Give Enough

Rivals Bid for Redskin Backs

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 6. In contrast to 1948, when they were crying for backfield men and were glad to hustle a newcomer named Macieszczyk into their lineup at Birmingham, the Washington Redskins now have an overflow of good backs. . . . Both the Los Angeles Rams and the Detroit Lions, whom the 'Skins have beat in exhibitions so far, seem to realize this and made trade overtures to owner George Marshall in telephone conversations today. . . . "They like our talent," Marshall said, 'but they don't want to give enough for it . . ." The Redskins are mainly interested in an experienced tackle, guard and center. . . . Coaches think one or more of the six tackles now with the club could be improved on. . . . And they want a center or guard so Dick Stovall can stick to one position or the other.

Harry Gilmer, who is almost universally known as a "sweet little ole boy" in Alabama, today started a busy social week leading up to Saturday night's exhibition against the Chicago Cardinals . . . The former Crimson Tide All-America was guest of honor along with Sammy Baugh, Paul Christman and Charley Trippi at a Kiwanis Club luncheon before making an appearance at a department store, the Children's Hospital and a radio station . . . After a night practice session, one of five the 'Skins will undergo here, tow-headed Harry figured to be a tired young man when he finally got home to his wife and two little girls.

The president of Birmingham's Kiwanis Club had guests applauding madly after Christman's brief address with his remark: "That's the first time in my life I've ever heard a man from Missouri make a good speech." . . . It was not the first meeting of Gilmer and Trippi, two of the South's most famous gridmen . . . Gilmer last tangled with the Georgia Ace in 1946, when Trippi led the Bulldogs to a 14-0 victory over Alabama . . . After completing none of his seven passes, Gilmer granted that Trippi was the "greatest back I've ever seen."

Boensch to Rams

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 6. The Redskins today sold 235-pound tackle Fred Boensch to the Los Angeles Rams for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Riders Held Too Friendly With Banned Bookmaker

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Two veteran jockeys of the Maryland half-mile circuit have been forbidden to accept any more mounts at Timonium, pending completion of an investigation of "fixed" races, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

Set down, at least until a hearing September 13 before the Maryland Racing Commission, are Jockeys Michael Sarno and J. C. Gilbert.

They've been under surveillance at Hagerstown and Bel Air, Md., and Charles Town, W. Va.

Reluctant to discuss the matter, Timonium Steward George Brown, jr., admitted the riding ban and said the Racing Commission would be informed of the action today.

Betting Coups Rumored

The investigation by the Thoroughbred Racing Association, racing's private detective agency, followed rumors of betting coups with horses being pulled by jockeys.

H. Courtney Jennifer, chairman of the Maryland racing body, admitted that he knew of the TRA investigation.

"That's about all I do know," Jennifer said, "and I'd prefer not to know anything else until the hearing.

"We've been informed that the full facts may be ready for presentation at the Sept. 13 meeting."

Apparently involved in the investigation is Tony Moscato, reputed Baltimore bookmaker. A racing official disclosed that Moscato had been ejected from Timonium and forbidden to return. Reason given was that TRA investigators found that he was "too friendly" with jockeys.

Kept Bad Company, TRA Says

The probe of the jockeys' activities has been going on for some time. Timonium's meeting opened only last Wednesday. Jockey Sarno was in the money only once in the first four days, winning last Saturday with Royal Patch, a $4.60 favorite.

One racing official, who saw a preliminary report of the TRA, disclosed that the two banned jockeys are suspected of associating with "bad characters."

Funny business at the Maryland half-milers isn't exactly new. The doping wave at Bel Air and Timonium in 1946 is one of the blackest on record.

At Bel Air that season, positive saliva tests were taken of nine winners. That was in late July and August. Even after a vigorous newspaper campaign—spearheaded by The Washington Post—dopings continued at Timonium's September meeting.

Ten positive cases were uncovered in pre-race tests. That was one good result of the campaign for the bettors. The drugged horses were disqualified before the public had a chance to lose wagers.

Sands Kayoes Turpin in 1st For British Title

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—Dave Sands, the Australian triple champion, won the British Empire middleweight crown tonight by knocking out Titleholder Dick Turpin of England in the first round of a scheduled 15-round bout.

Sands is the Australian middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight champion.

A capacity crowd of 10,600 in Harringay Area saw Sands floor Turpin twice for counts of nine before finishing him off.

Sands weighed 159, Turpin 157.

Yankees Recall Collins of Blues

Kansas City, Sept. 6 (AP).—First Baseman Joe Collins of the Kansas City club of the American Association was recalled today by the New York Yankees.

The office of the Kansas City Blues said Collins was to report to the Yankees in time for tomorrow night's game.

As a Blue, Collins has hit 15 home runs and marked up a batting average of .330.

Stock Car King Competes Tonight

Tommy Coates, winner of the 50-lap midsummer championship feature at West Lanham Speedway will return to action tonight when stock car racing is resumed with a seven-event program at 8:30 o'clock.

Coates, 35-year old Trenton, N. J., veteran, returned to Lanham after a lengthy absence to win the 50-lap title event two weeks ago.

Challenging Coates tonight will be Wally Campbell, Lew Volk, Hank Stanley, Ken Wagner, Washington's Tommy Herbert, Baltimore's veteran winner, Ken Marriott and Lanham's own novice driver, Cotton Kind.

Ulcer Keeps Hoya Back On Shelf

Georgetown's football prospects took a serious dip yesterday with the announcement that Billy Conn, flashy breakaway runner, will miss at least half the season.

Conn was found to have a penetrating duodenal ulcer and will be hospitalized for 10 days. Dr. Gerald H. McAteer, team physician, said yesterday he will be out of uniform for at least a month.

Physician Optimistic

Last week, when Conn first was examined for his stomach trouble, Dr. McAteer said that he thought the Newark, N. J., lad would be able to play this season even if he did have an ulcer.

As a sophomore last year, Conn lived up to preseason rave notices. He sprinted 75 yards for a touchdown against Boston College and threw two touchdown passes to beat Tulsa. His most spectacular run, 103 yards against Fordham, was recalled.

Conn's absence at the left halfback position is a serious blow for the Hoyas' offense. Babe Baranowski, stubby 5-foot-6 veteran, still hasn't recovered from the fractured clavicle that put him out of action last year.

Behind these two at the moment is Warren McFague, who paced the frosh last season with six touchdowns. After hearing the bad news on Conn, Coach Bob Margarita announced little Lou Miller, peppery fullback, has been shifted to the left-half berth.

Knee Injury Prevents Regan From Playing

The George Washington University football team, which has yet to hold its first vigorous scrimmage, yesterday lost its second regular of the practice season.

He is Guard Jim Regan, who has been ordered to submit to an operation for the removal of cartilages from his right knee.

Last Tuesday, End Tom Rielly was stricken with appendicitis and underwent surgery. He will be idle for at least six weeks.

Bolling Field Wins at Mineola

Mineola, N. Y. Sept. 6 (AP).—Smoky Hills base of Salina, Kans., was eliminated from the United States Air Forces world wide baseball championships today when it dropped its second straight decision.

In a first round game, Bolling Field of Washington, D. C., edged out Far East champions, Kadena Base of Okinawa, 5-4.

Senate Civil Service Committee to Probe Test for Examiners

An investigation of the controversial Civil Service test for hearing examiners will be launched in a few days by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

Chairman Johnston (D., S. C.) has given his approval for the inquiry which will be conducted by a special subcommittee headed by the chairman, or by the Civil Service subcommittee whose chairman is Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.). In any event, Humphrey will be on the subcommittee as he has been working for a full-dress investigation of the procedure used to set up the eligible list of hearing examiners.

The test was conducted by a board of well known private lawyers and judges who were appointed to do the job by the Civil Service Commission. The board members were unpaid. They resigned in a body, however, after their work was criticized and the commission failed to back them up.

Humphrey said yesterday that he wanted to know the standards and procedures used in setting up the register of eligible examiners. Also, he will demand to know why Civil Service hasn't acted sooner on the appeals of trial examiners who were declared to be ineligible. And he wants to know if the eligible list set up by the former board is to be used in filling jobs.

Several agencies, it seems, have hearing examiner jobs open but are reluctant to fill them with persons declared to eligible by the former board of examiners. The National Labir Relations Board is said to have more than 20 unfilled examiner jobs.

Members of the examining board are certain to ask for an opportunity to be heard before the investigating group. Their side of the story will cause some red faces within the Civil Service Commission.

LABOR: Its office of the general counsel has been reorganized and these appointments made: Charles Donahue to be in charge of the employment security division; Reid Williams, to handle international labor affairs; James O'Hara, to deal with legal problems growing out of the wage determination board, and B. Harper Barnes, to handle legislation.

LAY-OFF: The Army's Military District of Washington has unofficially and informally notified more than 500 of its employes in and nearby this city that their jobs will be abolished on or before November 1.

The big cutback will knock out 16.5 per cent of the Military District's 3400 civilian jobs here. Pending the actual layoffs, no hiring at any level will be permitted.

Employe turnover is running about 5 per cent a month, which means the lower personnel ceiling could be reached in about three months and very few firings would be necessary.

Even though Defense Secretary Johnson said the deep reduction in jobs had to be made by November 1, the military agencies have given out orders to speed up the layoffs. In fact, those agencies that wait until November 1 to make the layoffs may be forced to make even larger reductions...

MINES: Interior's Bureau of Mines has been reorganized along the lines reported here last week. The reorganization was made official yesterday in a statement by Director James Boyd.

J. H. Hedges of Tucson, Ariz., has been appointed chief of the minerals division. J. J. Forbes and Arno G. Fieldner will continue as chief of the health and safety and fuels and explosive divisions, respectively. E. D. Gardner has been appointed chief mining engineer, and Oliver C. Ralston as will appoint other outstanding chief metallurgist. The director people to advise him on the development of fundamental engineering and scientific projects.

Harold P. Greenwald will be regional director at Pittsburgh. Directors of the seven other new regions haven't been named.

JOBS: Civil Service has a new exam open for ammunition inspectors in Army Ordnance plants throughout the country. The jobs pay from $3351 to $4479 to start.

Negroes Say They'll Sue For Use of Central High

Spokesman Asks Action on Cardozo Jam; Connaughton Attacks Proposal

The Board of Education was threatened yesterday with court action if it does not transfer Central High School to the Negro school system, and with race bitterness if it does.

The transfer is one of three proposals made by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning to relieve overcrowding at the Negro Cardozo High School. Authorities agree that some of Central's facilities are unusued.

Enrollment at Cardozo last year was 1661; capacity is 1040.

Four proposals have been advanced to relieve Cardozo crowding: (1) temporary use of Central by Cardozo; (2) permanent use of Central by Cardozo; (3) a three-way shift of Cardozo to Wilson Teachers College, Wilson to Central, and Central Junior High to other junior high schools, and (4) a four-way shift of Cardozo to Miner Teachers College, Miner to Wilson, Wilson to Central, and Central junior high school students to other schools. Only the proposals to transfer Cardozo directly to Central were discussed yesterday.

Howard U. Man Hints Suits

The threat of court action came from three sources at yesterday's crowded public hearing on the controversial problem, when more than 30 individuals, representing thousands of citizens, presented their views to the board.

Dr. E. O. Knox, professor of education at Howard University, who represents the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the board: "Court cases of inequities are bound to ensue" unless "existing and inevitable future inadequacies are eliminated."

Dr. Paul Cooke, president of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL, listed 19 instances in which Cardozo fell below standards of white high schools.

Charges Law Violation

The Rev. Robert W. Brooks, representing the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance, reminded the board that the law requires equal educational facilities for all children. He said the law was being broken.

Arguing against transfer of Central High School, J. H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said that overcrowding at Cardozo originated when Negroes "infiltrated" into white neighborhoods. Connaughton said the proposed transfer had not been discussed by the 700,000 members of the Federation but he assured the board opposition to the transfer would be unanimous. He urged Negroes and whites to join forces and work together on Capitol Hill to get more money to build new schools.

Swimming Pool Disorders Cited

Speaking for the Central High School Parent-Teachers Association, Mrs. Charles Rupp told the board "race disorders at the public pools have proved that segregation must continue in Washington for some time. It is unwise to force the issue now by transferring Central High School. We want the school to remain for white children only."

Proponents of the transfer quoted liberally from the survey of District schools prepared last winter by Dr. George D. Strayer, particularly the statistics relating to overcrowding at Cardozo. These statistics were not contradicted by opponents of the transfer.

No decision on the transfer is expected this month, until many of the citizens' associations have met and filed their views with the board.

Alumni student representatives of Miner, Wilson and Central all objected to this proposal yesterday during the two-and-one-half-hour hearing.

Fear Injury to Tradition

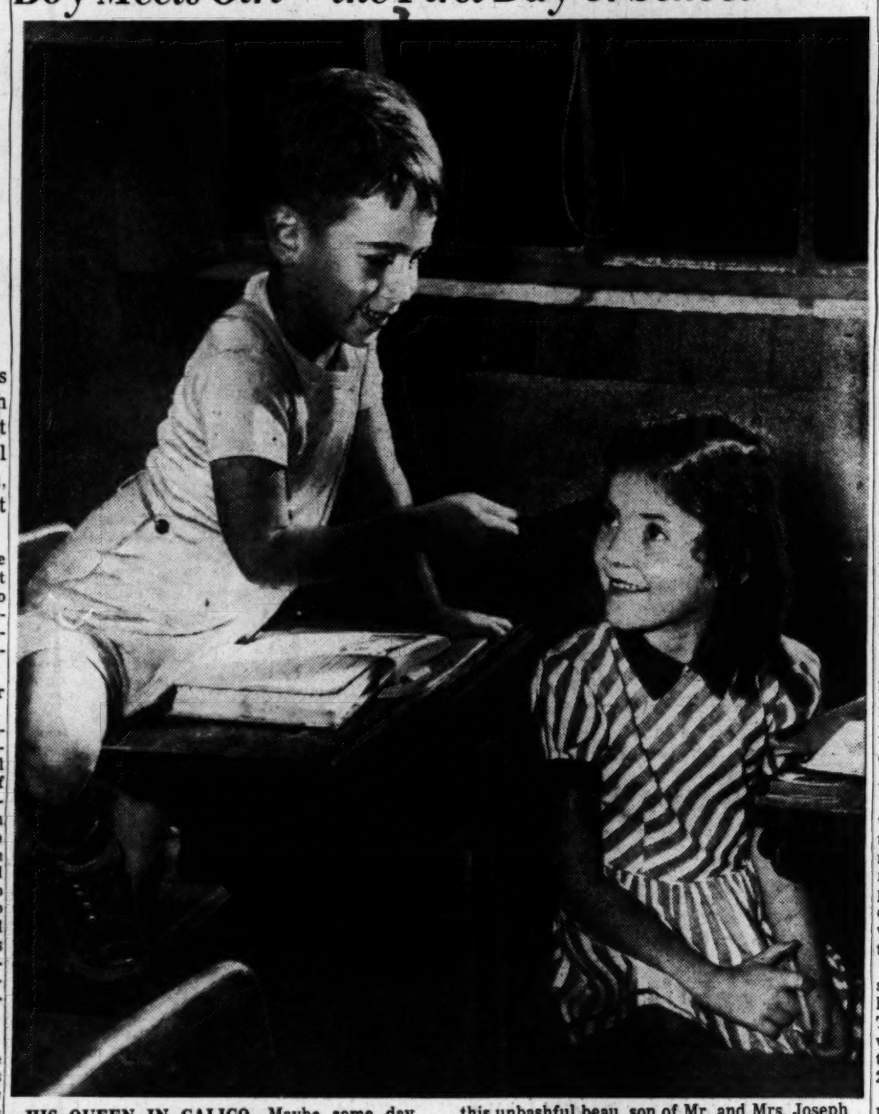
Many speakers, including Central student council representative Michael Troiani, and George Darling, president of the Central Class of 1886, testified that sentiment and tradition were important at Central and both would be destroyed by the proposed transfer.

Other speakers who appeared at the hearing included Clay Espey, Business-Roosevelt High School Alumni Association; George W. Hodgkins, Alumni Association of Central High School; Gardner Bishop, Consolidated Parent Group; C. K. Brown, Washington Chapter, Kappa Alpha Psi; Dr. Israel Light, American Veterans Committee; Mrs. M. B. Scott, Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations; John B. Duncan, Federation of Civic Associations; David Wells, Pleasant Plains Civic Association; W. L. Baker, Mt. Pleasant Citizens Association; John H. Savage, Columbia Improvement Association; and four men appearing as individual citizens.

Publisher to Speak

Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, will speak at 12:15 today on "Responsibilities of the Press" at the weekly luncheon meeting of the American Veterans Committee at the AVC Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Boy Meets Girl—the First Day of School



HIS QUEEN IN CALICO—Maybe some day he'll write on her slate, "I love you so," but yesterday at the Patrick Henry School in Arlington, Va.; Jerry Redbold, 6, was pulling her pigtails. She's Wanda Lee Lake of 2607 S. 8th st., Arlington, and didn't seem to mind this unbashful beau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Redbold, 1412 South Highland st. It was the first day of school, of course, and the first graders lost no time in getting acquainted. Registration in Arlington schols totaled 13,583 the first day, an increase of approximately 15,-

School Suit by Negro Girl In Arlington Heard by Court

There is "no common sense" in providing school facilities that aren't in demand, Arlington County officials argued yesterday after hearing charges that there is "no comparison" between their Negro and white high schools.

Three witnesses for a 16-year-old Negro girl, who charges discrimination in the county high schools, were examined before Judge Albert V. Bryan in Alexandria Federal District Court.

Lawrence Douglas, defense counsel for the county school board and superintendent, attempted to show that facilities in the Negro school are satisfactory although limited because of its small enrollment.

In some instances, Douglas contended in cross-examination, the Washington and Lee High School for whites has lesser facilities than the Hoffman-Boston School for Negroes.

"There is no equity or common sense in furnishing facilities at Hoffman-Boston which would not be used and for which there has not been any demand," Douglas said.

The suit was filed by Mrs. Eleanor Taylor of 3425 S. 22d st., Arlington, on behalf of her daughter, Constance Carter. It asks that the county be required to provide equal facilities for the girl at Hoffman-Boston or admit her to Washington and Lee.

Constance entered Dunbar High School in Washington in 1947, after she was unable to get desired courses at Hoffman-Boston and was refused admission at Washington and Lee.

Most of the afternoon was taken up with direct examination of J. Ruppert Picott of Richmond, executive secretary of the Virginia Teachers Association, by Attorney Spottswood Robinson, and cross-examination by Douglas.

Picott said things at Washington and Lee he considered "superior" to Hoffman-Boston included the auditorium, athletic and art facilities, science courses, workshops, business instruction and classrooms.

Douglas asked if smaller schools were not considered better by "expert educators." Picott replied there is "not necessarily great virtue in being small."

Earlier, Douglas cross-examined Allen G. Broadnax, Richmond photographer, who had taken 70 pictures of both schools which were introduced as evidence.

Picott and Broadnax frequently commented that "no comparison" exists in many respects between facilities at the two schools.

The hearing resumes at 10 a. m. today.

Police Alerted To Aid Walkers Cross Streets

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, yesterday issued a directive aimed at greater safety for pedestrians.

Barrett ordered that all policemen, regardless of their assignment and whether on or off duty, be alert at all times to assist blind, disabled or elderly persons and children in crossing streets.

He pointed out that of 48 persons killed in traffic here during the 1949 fiscal year, 32 were pedestrians. His order said that although the District received traffic safety awards last year, even greater achievements are possible.

New School Plans Ordered In Fairfax

The Fairfax County School Board yesterday ordered preliminary plans drawn for three new county schools and two additions.

Money for their construction is not yet available, but the board decided to prepare the plans and hope the General Assembly will provide the money next year.

The five projects, selected from a group of 21 which Supt. W. T. Woodson said are needed now, are: new elementary school at Baileys Crossroads; new elementary school at Tyler Park; new high school in Herndon; addition of six classrooms, cafeteria, auditorium, gymnasium, library and other special rooms at Mount Vernon High School; addition and brick facing for Fairfax Negro Elementary School.

The board is still in the process of acquiring sites for the schools at Tyler Park and Bailey's Crossroads.

Woodson said the board's action does not mean the other needed units—8 new schools and 13 additions—will be neglected, but simply that these five hold top priority.

In other actions yesterday, the board:

(1) Adopted a program for instruction in character-building to replace the released-time religious training which the board discontinued last spring. Under the new procedure, students will receive instructions through the regular curriculum in such subjects as "character education" and "major religions of the world."

(2) Voted to ask the county board of supervisors to erect a school administration building to replace the rented space now used.

Alexandria Orders Cut Of $410,000

Slash Won't Mean Dismissal of Any City Employes Now, Pancoast Declares

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

In an effort to keep Alexandria out of the red, Acting City Manager Joseph M. Pancoast today will order city department heads to shave $410,000 off their budgets for the remainder of the year.

The move will not mean the firing of any city employes, Pancoast said, but that no more will be hired. He said he has already specified where the cuts are to be made. He declined, however, to give details.

Pancoast, Alexandria city attorney until September 1, is acting manager because of the illness of Robert S. Marshall. Marshall, who has resigned, will be replaced September 15 by Guy Ancell, now city manager of Portsmouth, Va.

Announced at Meeting

Pancoast announced the cutback, which is more than 10 per cent of the city's budget, at a special meeting of the city council last night. The cutback, it was explained, carries the sanction of the council's finance committee, with which Pancoast has been studying the city's financial situation.

Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim said without the cut the city was heading toward a $450,000 deficit. The finance committee, he said, will make a report on the situation at the council's September 27 meeting.

Cause of the trouble, it was learned, was over-estimating revenues and the listing of an unrealized anticipated surplus of $217,000 in this year's budget.

Backing up Pancoast's statement, the council later in its meeting last night refused approval of Health Department salary increases totaling about $200, and of a $150 appropriation to send city firemen to a special school next week.

In other actions, the council:

1. Reorganized under the city's new mayor, Franklin P. Backus, who appointed members to 13 committees.

2. Adopted a resolution offered by new Councilman James M. Duncan, jr., that all regular meetings of the council be opened by prayer.

Councilman Marshal J. Beverley reported that a portion of the city shop which houses about $500,000 worth of city equipment has been condemned as a fire hazard. He requested a report from the fire marshal, the building inspector and the city manager on the situation at the next meeting of the council.

Booker Heads School Board Convention

Dr. Ivan A. Booker, National Education Association official, last night was elected chairman of the Arlington school board convention that will elect two nonpartisan candidates as nominees to the Arlington County school board.

Dr. Booker served as chairman of the school board conference last week that drew up convention plans. He was voted into office by more than 800 delegates and alternates to the convention, held in the auditorium of Washington-Lee High School.

After his election he appointed the entire slate of conference officers to serve as officers of the convention.

The other officers named are: Four vice chairmen, Mrs. Charles Goode, 418 N. Nelson st.; Mrs. Ruby Simpson, 2115 N. Military rd.; William C. Truss, 20 S. Nelson st.; and E. R. Draheim, 105 S. Aberdeen st.; treasurer, J. Ingram, 420 N. Thomas st.; assistant treasurer, Mrs. R. Owens, 3113 Key blvd.; counsel, E. D. Campbell, 2912 N. Glebe rd.; secretary, Mrs. Ayma Torrance, 6117 11th rd.; assitsant secretary, Mrs. Jeanchette, 5763 N. Fairfax dr.; historian, Mrs. Martha Gammon, 4019 S. 18th st., and sergeant at arms, Fred W. Bach, 1141 N. Utah st.

The convention tonight will choose two of six men to run for two school board vacancies in the field of 50 aspirants for the convention's indorsement was narrowed to the six.

The others are E. R. Draheim, chief of the preservice training section, Department of Agriculture; Jerome E. Levy, training technician, Navy Department; James E. Millar, real estate loan officer for Weaver Bros., Inc.; Rolland W. Stoebe, program analyst in the office of the Secretary of Defense, and George C. Updegraff, assistant corporation counsel for the District.

The delegates who represent eight county-wide civic organizations composed of 84-member bodies, will begin balloting at 8 o'clock tonight to select the candidates. A motion to select three candidates instead of two was defeated when Malcolm D. Miller, chairman of the rules and procedures committee of the convention, told the convention, "If you nominate three candidates you will defeat all three."

Shirley Road Saves Time, Test Reveals

By John London
Post Reporter

The new Shirley Memorial Highway, officially opened yesterday without fanfare, proved to be faster by at least one-third than the old journey via U. S. Route 1 between Washington and Woodbridge, Va.

A reporter found that it took 36 minutes to reach Woodbridge from the Virginia side of the 14th st. bridge, along Memorial blvd., through Alexandria, then south on Route 1.

The return trip along the 19-mile dual-lane concrete speedway took only 24 minutes, a saving of 12 minutes.

Both trips were made in the mid-afternoon.

During rush hours the proportionate saving in time would doubtless be greater. While the Shirley Highway is designed for speeds up to 70 miles an hour, Route 1 and Alexandria are knotted during rush hours.

Seven red lights were encountered on the Route 1 trip—at Powhatan, Cameron, King and Franklin sts., in Alexandria, and at the intersection just past the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad bridge near the Prince William County line.

There are no lights along the new highway named for the former Virginia Highway Commissioner, Henry G. Shirley, who is credited with pulling Virginia "out of the mud."

Then, too, the legal speed limit ranges from 50 down to 25 miles per hour on the old and often congested route.

Most of the new highway has a 55 miles speed limit. The first seven miles from Woodbridge, where only the southbound road has so far been completed, is used by traffic headed both ways and is limited to 50 miles an hour.

Moreover, the new thoroughfare is 3.4 miles shorter.

The highway is expected to absorb 80 per cent of traffic between Woodbridge and Washington and precipitate extensive construction in the adjacent Fairfax County farmland.

3 New Cases Of Polio Raise Total to 128

Three new cases of polio were reported within the District yesterday to bring the year's unofficial total to 52 as compared with 60 a year ago.

The area count is now unofficially 128.

Stricken were a five-year-old boy from the 3300 block of Ames st. ne., who entered Children's Hospital Saturday and was diagnosed Sunday; a four-year-old girl from the 3400 block of Quebec st. nw., who was admitted to Children's Hospital September 1, and was diagnosed Sunday; and a nine-year-old boy from the 1900 block of 18th st. nw., admitted to Children's Monday, and diagnosed Tuesday.

Policeman Hurt When Auto Forces 'Cycle Off Road

A speeding automobile last night ran a Naional Capital Parks motorcyle policeman off a Pentagon roadway, with the policeman attempting to halt the car with pistol fire.

The policeman, Pvt. Richard Wellman, Route 2, Fairfax, Va., suffered cuts and bruises as his motorcycle upset on the grass area alongside the road. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Wellman said the speeding driver permitted his motorcycle to get almost abreast and then started edging him off the road. He said the car sped in the direction of Highway Bridge toward Washington as he fired.

Blinded Veterans Association Opens Convention Today

Some 300 members of the Blinded Veterans Association are expected to attend the fourth annual convention which starts today for four days at Hotel Washington. Registration will begin at 9:30 a. m.

Featured will be exhibits and talks concerning achievements of sightless veterans in overcoming their handicap.

One of the exhibits will show blinded veterans at work repairing radios, running industrial machines, demonstrating X-ray and physiotherapy techniques and even raising chickens.

The convention highlight will be at the Saturday evening banquet at which the Blinded Veterans Achievement Award will be presented and "Employer of the Year" named.

Fr. Wilkinson Named Georgetown Treasurer

The Rev. Matthew W. Kane, S. J., treasurer of Georgetown University for seven years, has been succeeded by the Rev. James T. Wilkinson, S. J., from Gonzaga High School, the university announced last night.

Father Kane has been assigned to parish work as assistant pastor of the Church of the Gesu in North Philadelphia. He will leave Friday.

D. C. Heads Back Code To Curb Big Loan Costs

Regulations Aimed At Halting Practice Of Requiring Some Types of Insurance

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

After three years of debate, the Commissioners yesterday approved small loan regulations designed primarily to deter excessive lending charges for automobile purchases.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, principal author of the District regulations, said their chief effect would be to eliminate the practice of some lending firms in forcing borrowers to take out various kinds of insurance as a prerequisite to a loan.

The regulations go into effect November 1 which means lenders must file for license applications before October 1. The law requires publication of all license applications one month in advance.

Result of Campaign

Regulations to police the local lending business are the result of a vigorous campaign by the District Bar Association's small loan committee.

Loan companies will be allowed under the regulations to sell certain types of insurance for certain types of loans.

For an auto loan, $50, $75 and $100 deductible collision insurance and fire and theft insurance is permitted as a term for granting a loan. But borrowers cannot be forced to take out life, accident or health insurance.

If the loan is made on the collateral security of household furniture, fire and extended coverage insurance for a term not exceeding the life of the loan, also can be required by the lending company as a condition for making the loan.

Prepared Since 1946

The rulings have been in the making since September, 1946, and have been the subject of several lengthy District Building hearings.

William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for the Washington Association of Finance Companies, has led the opposition to the regulations. He has asserted that any tightening up would drive loan firms into nearby Maryland and Virginia and thus lose revenue for the District government.

Specifically the new regulations require that:

The interest charge authorized by District law—1 per cent a month on loans less than $200 and 8 per cent a year for larger loans—shall include all insurance premiums required of the borrower except for certain premiums exempted by the regulations.

Gray explained that some companies have been adding insurance charges rather than higher interest charges.

Must Take Out Licenses

Under the existing loan act, loan companies which charged more than 6 per cent interest are required to take out licenses.

Other key regulations direct that:

1. Officers of loan companies must state in license applications their connections with other businesses including insurance companies and new and used auto dealers, and

2. The loan company must deliver a copy of any insurance policy to the borrower within 20 days after the loan was made.

The regulations were prepared under the small loan act of 1913 which authorized the Commissioners to draw up rules covering the business.

Group Queries County On Sewage Facilities

The Glen Echo Heights (Md.) Tyler Park and Baileys Crossroads Citizens Association yesterday asked the Montgomery County health department whether absence of adequate sewage disposal facilities in its area might "increase the danger of polio or other epidemics in our area."

Jury Returns Four Killing Indictments

A fatal fight over a cigarette resulted in one of four homicide indictments being returned yesterday by the District grand jury.

They were among 60 true bills filed in District Court. Others involved 15 persons charged with complicity in the city's number lottery racket and 10 charged with transactions in "moonshine" whisky.

Charged with manslaughter in the "cigarette slaying" was John H. West, 22, of 10 Ritchie ave., Silver Spring, Md. The victim was Stroller Dallas, 32, 3330 Georgia ave. nw.

Police said that on August 14, the two men were in a group returning from a party, when one asked another for a cigarette. A fight began when the request was denied. Dallas was struck on the head with a sharp rock, dying a short time later. The fight occurred in the 7900 block of W. Beach dr. nw.

A first-degree murder indictment filed against Golding Vaughn, 39, of 417 12th st. se., charged him with shooting his common-law wife out of jealousy. She is Lucille Butler, 26, also of the 417 12th st. se. address. She died August 9 from a shotgun wound in her abdomen.

Also indicted on a first-degree charge was Mrs. Mabel C. Lee, 28, of 1518 D st. se. Police said that she showed neighbors a knife and said that she would use it to kill her husband, Wilbert Lee, 28, for having dates with other women. Lee was stabbed to death August 19 in his home.

Second-degree murder was charged to Roland Belton, alias Booker T. Edwards, 25, now at large. He is accused of fatally stabbing Lewis Crowder, 29, address unknown, in an argument over a woman.

The lottery indictments resulted from investigations of policemen here who made bets, they said, with various numbers writers between June and August.

Those indicted on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips were listed as:

Florence LaVorgna, 41, of 5701 Dix st. ne.; William H. Jackson, 29, of 314 59th st. ne.; Wilford A. Grove, 29, of 3300 Naylor rd. se.; Pearl L. Davis, 40, of 1133 Sixth st. nw.; Charlie Anderson, jr., 35, of 55 M st. nw.; Lydia Anderson, 30, of 55 M st. nw.; Frederick Douglas, 40, of 1436 W st. nw.; Francis D. Evans, 43, of 2719 Georgia ave. nw.; Thomas Peeler, jr., 31, of 1912 Temperance ct. nw.; William A. Mundell, 57, of 1206 D st. ne.; Asbury Seldon, 45, of 2430 Nichols ave. se.; Charles Bailey, 50, of 308 50th st. ne.; Harry D. Grable, 49, of 504 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md.; Eleanor B. Young, of 92½ Fenton st. ne., and Theresa Coleman, no age or address given.

Those charged with illegal liquor operations were listed as:

Bertha Rosenbora of 1528 7th st. nw.; James Pelzer, 49, 5312 F st. se.; William H. Ferebee, 38, of 4429 Hayes st. ne.; Paul E. Collins, 24, of 4429 Hayes st. ne.; William H. Carter, 52, of 78 Logan ct. nw.; Joe Hanna, 41, of 204 New York ave. nw., and Eleanor B. Young, Theresa Coleman, William H. Small and Walter Young, all of 92½ Fenton st. ne.

Louis B. Elze, 52, of 4542 MacArthur blvd. nw., a church sexton, was indicted on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill his wife, Augusta Elze, of the same address.

Hudgens Held For Jury In Slaying

John Hudgens, 27, of 755 Harvard st. nw., was held yesterday by a coroner's jury for grand jury action in the fatal stabbing Saturday night, of Bennie Lee Gist, 39, of 1712 Lincoln rd. ne.

Testimony showed Hudgens and Gist had been arguing over Mrs. Modest Gist in the Gist apartment.

Hudgens was arrested several blocks from the scene.

A coroner's jury released Thomas Neal, 25, of 1813 9th st. nw., at an inquest into the death of Alonzo Taylor, 38, of 1622 4th st. nw. Testimony showed Neal struck Taylor Friday night in the 1900 block of 7th st. nw., in the belief Taylor was about to strike him. Taylor died Monday of injuries suffered in the fall. The coroner's jury declared the case justifiable homicide.

At a third inquest yesterday, Wilbur Humphries, 31, of 2301 H st. ne., was released in the fatal shooting Monday of Ulysses Brame, jr., 26, of 323 G st. ne. Witnesses testified that Humphries, in his home, had taken shells from his gun and believed it empty. One, however, had stuck and was discharged, killing Brame. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. Dr. A. Magruder Macdonald, District Coroner, presided at the inquests.

Watson Miller Addresses 40 New Citizens at Oath-Taking

The American flag is "carrying liberation and succor to stricken lands everywhere," Commissioner Watson B. Miller told 40 new citizens yesterday in District Court.

Watson, head of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, delivered the major address at the naturalization ceremonies before Judge Matthew F. McGuire in District Court.

The commissioner also gave the citizens a definition of a democrat—in the general sense. He said:

"A democrat believes in people, likes them, wants to be no better and no worse than they are, feels for them, laughs at pretense and his own conceits, resents injustice, sees hidden possibilities and potentialities in his fellows, believes no legitimate goal justifies the warping of personality or the deliberate sacrifice of life."

Those naturalized were:

Panos Andrew Georgopulo, 42, 5119 Connecticut ave. nw., Greek; Mrs. Gertrude M. Heilbroner, 39, 2616 University pl. nw., German; Mrs. Helga Hoynes, 28, 3100 Connecticut ave. nw., German; Mrs. Edna Joyce Hollander, 23, 1900 Sheridan st., Green Meadows, Md., British; Mrs. Renee Kent, 23, 1816 19th st. nw., Egyptian; Mrs. Natalie Berdar, 23, 114 Varnum st. ne., Yugoslav; Francisco P. Gorospe, 43, 2225 N st. nw., Filipino; Mrs. Lydia E. J. Robertson, 23, 1149 Morse st. ne., British; Mrs. Rosa du Berrier, 28, 2445 15th st. nw., Iraquian, and Mrs. Ng Yuk Chun, 22, 718 9th st. ne., Chinese.

Mrs. Doris Eileen Wood, 36, 2127 California st. nw., Canadian; Mrs. Mary Cohen, 57, 620 Kennedy st. nw., Polish; Mrs. Elvira E. 13th and H Plan Backed By D. C. Heads

A "compromise plan" for ending the traffic bottleneck at the intersection of 13th and H sts. and New York ave. nw. was approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

The revamped channelization project also has the indorsement of trustees of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The new plan moves the channel, which will funnel two-way traffic in and out of H st., 30 feet east, or that much farther from the front entrance to the church.

Church members had feared that the original street project might make it hazardous for persons entering or leaving the church, or result in much noise during services.

The change in location of the channel will permit continuation of two tracts of Government-owned park land and trees with the one directly in front of the church measuring 90 by 95 by 75 feet.

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison said yesterday that work should start on the project within the next 10 days.

Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short

Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, 69, who was Army commander at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese attacked, will be buried today with full military honors in the Arlington Cemetery. The ceremony will take place at 3 p. m.

Short died of heart disease at his home in Dallas, Tex., Saturday night. He had been ill for several years. His widow, and his son, Maj. Walter Dean Short, an instructor at West Point, accompanied the body on its journey here. They arrived this morning.

Typhoid Hits Boy In Alexandria

The Alexandria Health Department yesterday reported the city's first typhoid case of the year.

Dr. T. F. McGough, city health officer, said the victim, an 18-year-old boy of the 1000 block of Madison st., has been treated with the new drug, chloromycetin, and is considered out of danger.

McGough said it is believed the boy was infected outside the city. He urged, however, all residents to "maintain the highest possible sanitation standards regarding water, milk and food supplies and sewage disposal systems."

Francis Pope, Finance Firm Head, Dies

Francis E. Pope, 76, chairman of the Board of Federal Services Finance Corp., 718 Jackson pl. nw., died at Homeopathic Hospital Monday evening after an illness of several months.

MR. POPE

Mr. Pope, who came to Washington in 1924, lived at 2126 Connecticut ave. nw. He was born at Du Quoin, Ill., where he attended local schools before graduating from Christian College, Eureka, Ill. Later he married Juliette W. Wall, and moved to Spokane, Wash., where he organized the real estate and insurance firm of Elmendorf and Pope.

In 1924 he came to Washington, where with the help of Col. Lewis W. Cass and Col. William H. Garrison, he organized the firm of Federal Services Finance Corp. He was president from its beginning until 1949, at which time he was elected chairman of the board.

Mr. Pope is survived by his wife, Mrs. Juliette W. Pope; one daughter, Mrs. Celeste Pope Fentress of Winnetka, Illinois; three grandchildren, Juliette, Mary and Thomas Fentress of Winnetka; and two brothers, H. O. Pope of DuQuoin, and Karl D. Pope of Long Beach, California.

Services will be seld at Hine Funeral Parlors, 2901 4th st. nw, 4 p. m., Thursday.

More Efficient Insect Spray Invented Here

An aerosol sprayer which the consumer can refill as readily as a cigarette lighter has been perfected by a Washington engineer, it was disclosed yesterday.

The device not only eliminates periodic return to the manufacturer for refilling but can be put to many uses not within the present range of high-pressure insecticide bombs now on the market, it was said.

Such new uses include atomizing deodorants, mothicides, germicides and other solutions which freeze in the refrigerant action of pressurized gas used in aerosol bombs, said Engineer Paul Engstrum, of Hotel Hamilton, here.

The new sprayers, to be manufactured in plastic for civilian use, closely resemble the familiar telescope-type bicycle tire and football pumps. The insecticide or other solution to be sprayed in aereated mist is funnelled into the upper cylinder through an inset screw, much like one fills a cigarette lighter.

In use, the spray comes out a special nozzle in a free-floating mist rather than in the quickly settling droplets emitted by conventional, hand-operated spray guns now used by householders and gardeners.

Engstrum said he expects that the sprayers, already in Army use, will be manufactured for the public market by next spring. He said one filling of hs device does the work of several fillings of present "bombs." The "loaded gun," he estimated, will sell for about $3.50, with refills costing less than $1.

Col. B. Morgan Shepherd

Ashland, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—B. Morgan Shepherd, 75, vice president and head of the advertising department of The Southern Planter, died at his home here last night at 6:45 after a lingering illness.

A past president of the Agricultural Publishers Association, Shepherd was a member of the APA board of directors at the time of his death. He was secretary of the Virginia State Farmers' Institute for more than 30 years and was prominent as a speaker on agriculture.

He served as mayor of Ashland for 20 years and was judge of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court of Hanover for a number of years.

Mrs. Irene Hurdle

Mrs. Irene Jeffries Hurdle, a native of Washington who died Monday at her home in Chicago, will be buried in Mount Hebron Cemetery at Winchester, Va., Friday.

Mrs. Hurdle was 48. She was the wife of Walter G. Hurdle, formerly associated wit hthe Burroughs Adding Machine Co. here and now district manager for the Mittag & Volger Co. in Chicago.

Mrs. Hurdle was descended from the Meitzey family which owned lands adjoining Mount Vernon. She was educated in District schools and was a graduate of the Washington Business College and the Washington Conservatory of Music.

Surviving relatives include Mr. and Mrs. William B. Sinnott of 2719 Ordway st. nw.

New Shopping Twist Pays Off For Jangoes

Here's a new twist to fund raising for your civic club. It requires less work and in most cases is more fun than the perennial benefit tea party.

It's a shopping service which has been tried out this summer by the Junior Army-Navy Guild organization. This is how it works. A corps of young Jangoes is contracted by a department store as personal shoppers. The store's manager gives the girls a list of articles they may buy—usually one in each department—and the money to pay for them.

Then the girls, one at a time, do the shopping. After making the purchase the shopper fills out a card stating how courteous the sales slerk was, how long it took to make the purchase, and did the clerk count the change?

For this job the stores give Jango $50-$100, which in turn is used for its charitable projects.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widowed Business Woman Greatly Enjoys Her Job But Prefers Solitude to Social Life in Leisure Hours; Is This Odd or Unnatural?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a widow for many years, going to business, keeping house and bringing up two sons. I have had good times and bad times and have been able to take them all in stride, as one must.

When my sons and the man in my life went overseas during the war (which was the second "world war" for the man), I learned —the hard way—to live alone and like it. My sons came back safely; God was good to me in that; but the man did not. He had meant a great deal to me; his friendship and companionship I shall hold dear, and the memory lives on.

I had always been fun-loving, enjoyed going out, liked people and places; but since the war my values have changed and being in middle age I have slowed up, of course, and the things which used to interest me don't now.

She Even Hates to Answer Phone

I WORK in a very busy interesting place, full of people, noise and confusion and I enjoy my work, which is creative and pleasant. Also I enjoy the people with whom I work, but when closing time comes I so look forward to the quiet and solitude of my apartment I like eating alone, reading as I eat; and I go to bed very early relax and listen to some favorite radio program until I fall asleep

I have no desire to go out or to have anyone in; I even hate to answer the telephone and often don't. My one son works out of town, the other travels and comes home weekends; and I enjoy having him, cooking for him, etc., but I also enjoy my week of solitude. If I have a long week end I go to visit my other son or old friends in another city, which I look forward to and enjoy.

My friends here think me odd, I know, and can't understand why I refuse to go to the movies with them or join in card games, etc.; but if I do so I am bored and wish I were home. Do I sound odd to you, or unnatural? Or do you think I am in a rut, because I enjoy being alone so much? I hope you will give me the benefit of your excellent clarifying comment. C. E.

Case of Drifting With the Ebb-Tide

DEAR C. E.: In the normal life span, lasting say 70-odd years, the season of involutional change, introducing the ebb-life of reproductivity, begins around middle age, say 45. And in this transition phase—the climactic turning point from morning to afternoon of life—the individual is required to accommodate to a gradual dimunition of vital energy: emotional and physical.

In women the phenomenon is commonly labeled menopause, but it seems there is no equally wellworn term of reference to the comparable change in male physiology,—maybe because men like to hope they're exempt from it. At any rate they seem to maintain a defensive blankness towards the subject as it includes them,—and it definitely does.

As the ebb-tide makes itself felt, some men as well as some women go to illogical extremes in departing from previous social habits. At one extreme, some behave as if old age were already upon them and figuratively take to the chimney shelf, clutching memories and tag-ends of long-tended relationships as souvenirs of "the good old days." At the other extreme, some begin to thresh around frantically to renew—if possible,—their option on youth.

Needs Equal Rest and Social Action

IN THIS season you see men as well as women getting slack in looks, personality and behavior, as if self-consigned to the ash heap,—neglecting niceties in dress, grooming, social responsiveness, heterosexual sentiment, etc., such as add up to personability at any age. (Louis Bromfield's heroine "Mrs. Parkington" is a case in point.) But also you see others straining desperately to seem as young as they once were—men bolting the traces to seek elixir in new embraces and women chasing the illusion down blind alleys of narcissism, too.

Fortunately, you are disposed to accept the physiology of middle age; but in my judgment, your drift towards reclusive habits is too much on the self indulgent side to be healthy for you, in the long run. Addiction to solitude, even when solitude is enjoyed, engenders subjective weariness, which increases social lethargy. And though I feel, with you, that movie-dates and bridge games with boring acquaintances aren't tasty social fare, still they're better for you than the solitary trend.

Obviously you have a better-than-average mind, and my advice is to associate yourself with civic groups that have evening meetings aimed at improving local or National government. That type of social action is the antidote to your "finis" attitude—which I presume is linked to your friend's death. I daresay his companionship, though dear to you, was a source of frustration, too,—so that the end of "hope deferred" (with marriage never realized) found you bone-tired and craving rest above all else. But after some rest, you've got to circulate socially to recoup zest. M. H.

Decorative New Shops Open Today

CONNECTICUT AVE.'S newest, and most decorative, shopping center officially opens today when a trio of shops make an autumn season debut.

Located at the corner o DeSales st. and the avenue, the center houses the following; uptown branches of Erlebacher's, a ladies specialty shop; I. Miller's, a shoe store; and Susann's a new perfume and cosmetic shop.

Both the I. Miler and Erlebacher stores are ready to serve customers today, but the perfume shop will not be fully ready for occupancy until Friday, due to last-minute changes in the color scheme.

The three shops represent the latest trends in interior decoration for commercial establishments. Indirect lighting, glass paneling, and artful colors in carpets, drapes and walls all play important roles in the decor.

The perfume shop, surrounded on two sides by planes of glass is decorated in blue gray and pale pink with a deep rose carpet. Erlebacher's is entered through a shell pink door and the walls of the salon are tinted the same color. Chairs and other furnishings are French Provincial in design and the carpet is a pale gray taupe. I. Miller's spacious store gives the effect of being even larger than it is with the use of glass panels and lighting. Green foliage is used throughout the center as an added decorative note.

WHEN the trees begin to change into colorful autumn dress along Connecticut ave. you'll need a chic new suit to match their splendor. This one, from the new Erlebacher's shop on the avenue, will fill the bill nicely. Made of imported French tweed in black and blue, it consists of slim black skirt, vest and interesting cape-coat. The latter is three-quarter length with sleeves cut into the fabric in a manner that gives the impression of a wide swimming cape, rather than a coat. The hat, custom made, is of black persian lamb.

Women's Ad Club to Meet for Luncheon

The Women's Advertising Club of Washington will launch its fall season with a luncheon Wednesday, September 14, at 12:30 p. m., at the Washington Hotel. New officers and committee heads will be presented to other members of the organization.

Newly appointed committee chairmen announced by Miss Jane Beam, club president, include Miss Pat Griffith, program; Mrs. Ruth Cotting, membership; Miss Esther Kravitz, finance; Miss Ruth Marie Schultz, publications; Miss Katherine Bowers, legislature; Miss Kay Hansen, constitution and by-laws; Miss Hildred Hillix,

Tobe Says

Shortcoat Is Top Fashion

Like pleated dresses, the shortcoat is another "one world" fashion—as important in Paris as it is here. It's no longer new—but the number of women who are buying new winter shortcoats right now—plus its continued emphasis at the Paris openings—prove that the shortcoat is still today's and tomorrow's fashion.

Top shortcoat fashions: casual shortcoats in chinchilla; short fur-liners; pretty fur-collared dress shortcoats—and short fur coats, of course.

Ask Anne About Recovering Folding Screen

I have a bedroom folding screen which needs recovering. Can you tell me where in Washington I could have this work done? V. F.

Since you didn't say what the screen is to be covered with, I can't be of specific help. However, although they don't make a specialty of it, some upholstery firms will cover screens with fabric or even leather. If it is to be covered with wall paper, a paper hanger could do it in a few minutes when he is at your home or nearby on a larger job. Or, you could cover it with paper yourself very easily.

I am planning a six-weeks vacation in California around the end of December. I am planning on staying in San Francisco most of the time, but will visit further south, Hollywood, Los Angeles, etc. What kind of clothes would be proper to wear and what kind of weather do they have in San Francisco and Los Angeles about Christmas? Can one usually store bags at the hotel when not needed on a short journey? Most of my activities will be a cocktail here and there, a few nice parties where I could wear a cocktail dress, a street dress or a suit. Do they wear more hats in California than they do in Washington? Also, would it be advisable to take my fur coat or would it be better to have a short fur jacket? B. M.

Would one of our readers who has been in California recently be good enough to tell B. M. about the type of clothes worn there?

As for storing the luggage while you are away from the hotel on side trips, I think you will find that you can easily arrange for such short time storage at the checking counter right in the hotel.

What, please tell, can I do to get rid of weevils in my kitchen cabinets? I believe this is the name of the insect—small, brown and hard-shelled and always appear in and around packages of cake mix, baking soda, the flour can, etc. No doubt they are brought home from the stores to a great extent, but I inspect every package and have resorted to putting cellophane tape on every package before opening and after opening. If contents are only partially used, I put rest of contents in a sealed jar. Still I find them and am completely baffled as the cupboards are scrubbed and cleaned very regularly. Any suggestions will be appreciated. P. C. B.

When your cupboards become infested with flour beetles or weevils, the only way to rid yourself of them completely is to get rid of all cereal products, including prepared breakfast foods, which may be infested. After you have destroyed the infested food, remove everything from the cupboard shelves and thoroughly wash them. When clean, spray cracks, shelves and wall behind shelves with a 5 per cent solution of DDT. Leave shelves empty long enough for the spray to dry completely. Enough small crystals will remain on the shelves and in cracks to kill any insects coming in contact with them for several months.

Because, as you say, you bring some of these pests home from the store in cereal products, it would be wise to put all cereals which are bought in cardboard packages or paper sacks into metal or glass containers with tight-fitting covers before storing in a cupboard. If they should be infested, the bugs will then be confined to one container and the entire cupboard will not become contaminated.

The worst season for these pests is right now in warm, humid weather. If you should now rid yourself of them, you should have no further trouble with them once the weather is cooler.

Is there some way of removing perspiration odor from a leather wrist watch strap? I have several good straps which I can't wear because they have such an odor. I tried cleaning one strap with saddle soap but that didn't help. S. H.

Sponge the inside of the strap with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added and then sprinkle it with a deodorant powder which can be purchased at a drug store. Let the powder stand on the strap until it is thoroughly dry and brush away. If all the odor is not removed the first time, repeat the treatment.

Will you give me the address of any firms handling jewelry mountings, that is, for semi-precious stones. My husband is a lapidary and if we could get a catalog could choose the mountings for the gems. G. M. H.

Firms listed under "Jewelry—Manufacturing" in the yellow pages of the telephone book sell mountings retail and wholesale. One firm listed there which also can provide you with catalogues of mountings can be reached by calling National 3488.

I spilled some crude paraffin on the wallpaper. What will remove it? H. H.

Carbon tetrachloride is a good solvent for paraffin oil, but in order to remove completely the oil from wallpaper, it is necessary to apply the solvent in the form of a poultice. To do this, mix carbon tetrachloride with cornstarch to form a paste and spread it thickly over the oily spot. Let stand until starch is completely dry and brush away. If all the oil is not removed by the first application, repeat.

In Bridal Procession

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Palko of Johnstown, Pa., announced the marriage on September 3 of their daughter, Anna C., to David A. Dow, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brehm of Sunnyvale, Calif.

The ceremony took place at the National Baptist Memorial Church. The Rev. Dr. Howard Haworth performed the ceremony and Mr. Palko gave his daughter in marriage. She wore ivory satin and Chantilly lace and carried white roses and gardenias.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Misses Mary and Rose Palko. Howard Dow was his brother's best man, and the ushers were George Cardenas and Angelo DeVivo.

Following a reception at the Admiral Club, the couple left for a wedding trip to the Pocono Mountains. They will live in Fairfax County, Va.

Brennan—Cayard

Lieut. Myrtle P. Cayard, A. N. C., of Port Heehes, Tex., was married September 1 in the post chapel of the Army Medical Center to Thomas H. Brennan of Cranston, R. I.

The Rev. Gerold J. Kaiser performed the ceremony and Lieut. Col. Michael Sheppeck gave the bride in marriage. Miss Claire P. Egan and Francis J. Ferguson attended the couple.

Schultz—Freitag

Miss Louise Vinson Freitag and Bernard E. Schultz were married Friday, September 2, in Christ Luthern Church, Bethesda. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clemence William Freitag of Chevy Chase, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Charles Yeager of Johnsonburg, Pa.

The Rev. Otto C. Schuetze officiated at the ceremony in the presence of members of the immediate families. Mrs. Schultz was graduated recently from Leland Stanford University. Mr. Schultz is a veteran of the United States Navy, and a student at the University of Maryland.

One on the Aisle—

Theater Guild's Missing a Tent

By Richard L. Coe

THE THEATER GUILD, which once had 15,000 Washington subscribers, is getting its thirtieth anniversary season started.

It invites you to join its Baltimore subscription series of five plays and also to listen to its Sunday radio hour, courtesy of United States Steel, which starts its fifth year next Sunday.

Isn't that nice?

No one has greater admiration for the Theater Guild than I. Its long, distinguished record cannot be matched. What makes it outstanding is the fact that it is one of the rare continuous production groups in America. The Shuberts and Arthur Hopkins have continued to produce through that 30-year period, but there is no group which can point to so long a record as the Guild.

It has had its ups and downs. When "Away We Go" opened in Boston six years ago, the Guild had $17 in the bank. That title was changed to "Oklahoma," and up in Canada this week it's still pouring money into the Guild treasury.

With all respect to Lawrence Langer and Theresa Helburn, what the Guild seems to need now—and badly—is new blood. I've no doubt they've tried hard to find it, and in the theater new blood that's reliable is rare stuff. For all its radio and televised plays, what the Guild lacks now is imagination.

Last season the Guild had 30 cities on its subscription rolls. This year's brochure lists 21. At the end of last year it had to refund over half a million dollars' worth of tickets because it had no plays to deliver.

Last season Baltimore was promised five plays, three of which arrived. Of seven listed "possibilities," only one appeared at Ford's.

Miss Hepburn in Revival

For this season these are mentioned—with the cautionary note: "We reserve the right to make any changes in or substitutions of plays that may prove necessary."

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "I Know My Love," adapted by S. N. Behrman from Marcel Achard's Parisian hit, "Aupres de ma Blonde."

"The Silver Whistle," "The Madwoman of Chaillot" and "A Streetcar Named Desire," all produced in New York by other managements but sent on the road through the Guild subscription plan.

Katharine Hepburn in "As You Like It."

This last, it seems to me, is what the Guild might make much of—not for New York alone, but for the road audiences, which it has done so much to hold during the last generation.

There are any number of distinguished plays among the 168 that the Guild produced which could stand revivals and road tours under Langer-Helburn auspices. The Guild produced most of the important plays of Shaw, Molnar, Sidney Howard, O'Neill, Anderson, Behrman, Barry and Saroyan.

What about dipping into them?

What about employing some of the perfectly capable actors whose reappearances on summer stages is the only thing to remind theatergoers that they're still alive?

For, whether it likes it or not, the Guild is one of our few custodians of the art of acting. If it were known that for its 30th season the Guild were planning to revive one Shaw, one O'Neill, one Howard ("The Silver Cord"), one Anderson, it could corral some acting companies of first rank.

And though it runs one of the best summer theaters in the business (Westport, Conn.), the Guild seems to ignore the fact that new audiences are available all the time. Summer audiences are new audiences, and if they're given the chance they'll make it a year-round habit.

Getting closer to home, what a field day the Guild could have right here in the Nation's Capital! Mr. Langner dreamed last spring of putting up a tent in Washington for the Lunts' new vehicle, but I've heard nothing of it since.

Why doesn't the Guild go ahead and do it? It's got the backbone of a two-week stand in its old subscribers and won't have to insult them by asking them to trek to Baltimore for its plays.

Contact Miss Schreiner

Why doesn't the Guild use those subscribers to show the National management, one way or the other, whether it would like the National to resume plays?

Why, in short, can't the Guild pay less attention to New York and its maligned critics and reach out to the potential audiences formed by its Sunday night radio hour, consistently voted the best of its kind on the air?

Don't misunderstand me. I still admire the Guild's unique contribution to the American theater.

For details on the Guild's coming season in Baltimore, contact Bess Davis Schreiner in her office in the mezzanine lobby of the National, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from noon till 5 p. m.

'Lame Duck's' Plea Denied in Montgomery

The Montgomery County Council yesterday rejected a former county commissioner's request for $60 he said was due him for six "lame duck" meetings he attended before the charter government took over.

The petition came from George C. Esworthy, who said he was due $10 for each of six assessment hearings during December, 1948, and January, 1949.

These hearings were held between December 2, 1948, when the charter became law, and January 18, 1949, when the new County Council took office.

Esworthy, through his attorney, F. Bernard Welsh, claimed that, as a commissioner, he was entitled to the special $10 as well as his regular commissioner's pay.

The council, however, held the lame duck commissioners were acting as an "interim County Council," and entitled only to the new council pay of $20 for each regular meeting—not commissioners' pay.

Once the charter became law, the council held, the five lawmakers ceased being commissioners.

If the council is "in error in this conclusion," the council's opinion said, then it "might follow" that all five of the former commissioners are entitled to pay at the rate of $1800 yearly from January 18, 1949, to November, 1950, when their 4-year terms would have expired.

Council President Frederic P. Lee said that if the former commissioners bring suit the council "might" press a counter claim on grounds that during the "lame duck" period, all five received compensation at the regular commissioners' pay, rather than the lower council pay.

Bird Lover Takes Cat Issue to Council

Killer cats should be eliminated if their owners don't keep them from songbirds, R. E. Wensel, 4226 East-West hwy., a Chevy Chase bird lover, complained yesterday to the Montgomery County council.

Wenzel cited the case of one cat in his neighborhood which, he said, recently killed one robin and a female cardinal.

Wenzel said he had bought seed, at 30 cents a pound, to attract songbirds to his yard. He said the cat had been hiding in his yard, preying on the birds.

The council referred the matter to its attorney.

Falls Church Annexation Issue Debated

Leaders for and against proposed annexation by Falls Church of adjoining territory clashed head-on in debate last night.

They were Harold O. Ward, leader of the opposition, and LaRue Van Meter, Falls Church city attorney, who is conducting the city's court action to legalize the annexation.

They spoke at the Odd Fellows Hall at a meeting sponsored by the Tyler Park Citizens Association.

Ward attacked the plan as uneconomic at the present time. He estimated that it will cost at least four million dollars which he said the city can ill afford to spend now. Among the cost items he estimated are $1,800,000 in "civic improvements"; $600,000 to $1,000,000 for sewage disposal, and a new city hall, jail, and justice court building, costing a total of $400,000.

Van Meter cited the city's record of accomplishment in the past two years as evidence that it can go forward with the annexation. The accomplishments include, he said, an expanded city council, a commissioner of revenue, a city treasurer, a modern, effective budget system, a recreation commission, a trained police force, control of two schools wrested from Fairfax County by court action, a new school board and superintendent, and financing of a new one-million-dollar water system.

No decision was made on the debate between the two. Van Meter said the court case on annexation will come up in about two weeks.

U. S. Seized Their Troops, Czechs Say

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The government declared tonight that United States Army troops seized 22 Czech soldiers and a 9-year-old boy August 27, and questioned them for 24 hours before releasing them.

The government said the incident took place near the town of Nove Donky, in the border district of Tachov, opposite the United States occupation zone of Germany.

The charge was contained in a note delivered by the foreign office to the American Embassy here tonight. The embassy declined to comment.

The note denounced the incident as a "pronounced, intentional and gross violation of Czechoslovak sovereignty."

The note said that "the Americans attempted to persuade the soldiers to disclose military secrets. They were advised to desert, but they refused this with contempt."

The note also said the Americans used "unheard of methods" in their interrogation of the Czech soldiers, and "threatened (them) with their fists."

It claimed that one American soldier stole a pamphlet from the Czech entitled, "How to Keep the Truck in Running Order."

The commander of the U. S. troops disregarded advices that he was on Czech soil, the note said.

"I have orders from my superiors to bring these men to Bavarian territory," the note quoted the American officer as saying.

The soldiers and the child were riding in a truck carrying a load of firewood on a back country road when they were halted by the Americans, the note stated.

The incident is supposed to have occurred in an area where a part of Germany juts between two pieces of Czech territory.

The Czechs said the ministry of foreign affairs first protested the incident to the American embassy here on August 28. It said the embassy replied in a note on August 31.

The new note was delivered to the embassy at 6 p. m., and two hours later its contents were made public over the state radio.

2 More Safes Looted; Third Attempt Fails

Two safe robberies and one attempt were reported to police yesterday, bringing to seven the total for the holiday weekend.

Loot from the seven totaled approximately $2700 in cash and jewerly and an additional $1000 in checks.

Despite the wave of safe-breakings, which have plagued police for two months, Lieut. Aubrey Tolson, head of the general assignment detective squad, said yesterday that "the number of housebreakings is no larger than usual" and that "you can't be surprised if a man, once inside a place, tries to get into the safe."

William F. Clay, manager of the food concession at the Hall & Sothoron Pharmacy, 1801 K st. nw., reported that thieves took $30 from a cash drawer after they were unsuccessful in trying to enter a safe. On August 22, thieves entered the Kedrick Grill in the same building and took $157.

The Hall & Sothoron Pharmacy is the one where two detectives shot Henry "Big Boy" Milton, to death a year ago. The officers were planted in the place at night in anticipation that Milton, a known gangster and narcotic addict, would break in to steal narcotics.

Milton Diener, manager of Diener's, Inc., a rug company at 1500 Rhode Island ave. ne., reported that thieves took $286 in cash and more than $900 in checks from an unlocked safe in the place.

Thieves failed to open the safe in a Safeway store at 1525 17th st. nw. On August 22, safebreakers obtained $200 in a garage a block from that store.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

AL Walters is starting another beauty show.

The Old New Orleans is the place, with owner Nick Gaston the soul of enthusiasm over the plans. The winner, appropriately enough, gets a trip to New Orleans at Mardi Gras time with all expenses paid.

The contest opens tonight, continues through January. Then the lucky girl takes a month to rest and improve her charm before tangling with the Southern belles.

Girls will be picked, Walters says, from all fields—Government girls, college coeds, District housewives, or young women in private industry. And his eagle eye has been watching the guests at the Old New Orleans. When a guest comes in who's particularly beguiling, he suggests that she join.

Beginning tonight, hopefuls appear on the dance floor in evening gowns. (No bathing suits in this contest.) While the orchestra plays "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," each girl walks around, and is then interviewed as to her plans.

The guests vote by ballot. Not until the finals are outside judges brought in.

THERE'S a new song going the rounds these days, with a lilting melody and a Washingtonian signing his name to it. Larry Palma, originator of "Maria Mia," is pretty proud of his first professional effort.

However, another Larry—Larry Campo—is doing most of the honors of the introductions. Now in his eighth week at the Merryland Club, he sings and plays the piano in a smooth, easygoing style. And he particularly likes his friend Larry's song. On September 10 he'll give up his stint of alternating with the Ko Ko Nuts at the Merryland, and go to the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans. But he can't stay away from Washington—he insists he'll be back by December.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

The Loss of a Child

With our greater medical knowledge, far fewer families have to face the loss of a child through death than did the families of 50 years ago. But the adjustments are just as hard when death does occur.

Some years ago friends of ours lost their youngest boy through drowning. When we visited them, they could talk of little else than the promise this youngster had shown. Though there were three fine older children, little was said about them. We couldn't help but wonder what effect our friends' attitude must have had on these youngsters.

It is easy to understand how the sorrow coming with the death of a child would tend to cause parents to feel he was superior to the others. If they recognize the likely effect on the remaining children, however, attempts will be made to keep things in perspective. Overmuch time spent in talking about and grieving over the child who has died means that brothers and sisters will feel neglected and may even begin to build resentments toward the dead child.

Three Hit by Food Poisoning

Three employes of the swank Congressional Country Club in Montgomery County were stricken with food poisoning yesterday but club officials were at a loss to account for the attacks.

The victims, all treated and released at Georgetown University Hospital, were: Percy Graham, 40, a houseman of 815 25th st. nw; John Cole, 41, a kitchen helper of Ringo, Va., and Eugene Swindler, 23, a waiter of 20½ Q st. nw.

Club Manager A. E. Martin said the three employes had lunch about 11:30 a. m. yesterday, eating the same food served to roughly 100 club patrons and employes. They complained of being ill about 2:15 p. m. and were taken to the hospital by units of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Glen Echo Rescue Squads.

According to Martin, the three said they had not eaten or drunk anything unusual. Other persons who ate the same food at the club suffered no ill affects.

Montgomery County Health Department inspectors last night said further laboratory tests would be made.

Cain to Address Republican Rally In Alexandria

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) will be the keynote speaker at a dinner-dance program Friday in Alexandria when Northern Virginia Republicans will launch the November election campaign at a gathering of local, State and national party leaders.

The dinner will honor GOP gubernatorial candidate Walter Johnson, making his first public campaign appearance in the area, and three candidates for the House of Delegates—Richard Buckingham, of Alexandria; I. Lee Potter of Arlington; and Douglas Clark of Fairfax County.

Toastmaster will be Tyrell Krum, chairman of the Fairfax County Republican Committee, sponsors in conjunction with GOP committees and clubs of the Northern Virginia area. Mrs. Margaurite Duncan is program chairman.

D. C. Lawyer Gets Junior Bar Post

Charles H. Burtin, 33, a Washington attorney, yesterday was named vice-chairman of the Junior Bar Conference, meeting yesterday in St. Louis.

Burton is associated with the law firm of MacCracken & O'Rourke, and is a former national secretary of the Junior Bar. He lives at 1508 Seminary rd., Silver Spring.

The District Junior Bar group received honorable mention at the St. Louis convention for outstanding activities. The Junior Bar is made up of lawyers under 35 years of age.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Milton Shubert, the producer who obtained the rights to Puccini's music, and who signed Deems Taylor to assist in the adaptation for Broadway, is employing Fausto Cleva of the Metropolitan Opera to conduct the show. Cleva knew Puccini and conducted his music in Italy . . . Shubert and Taylor asked him to tell them about Puccini. "He was a sentimental man," sighed Cleva. "The maestro was most sentimental." As an example he told of the rehearsal of a Puccini concert. Puccini attended the rehearsal, listened to the Puccini music and wept. "I stopped the rehearsal, and asked him 'Maestro, why do you weep?'" said Cleva. "Puccini was so sentimental. He wept some more, and said 'Such glorious music, Cleva, glorious music.'"

The illness of Supreme Court Justice Wiley Rutledge may result in his resignation . . . The producers of Ingrid Bergman's new picture, "Under Capricorn," ran each reel carefully, to see if any of her lines might be given an unintended interpretation by moviegoers, in view of the subsequent events at Stromboli. They discovered that almost all of Miss Bergman's lines would be given new significance by the audience, and it is too late to change them.

Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, flew to Japan recently to make a speech at the dedication of the Peace Monument in Hiroshima. After Cousins' speech and the dedication ceremonies were over, the Mayor of Hiroshima took him and some other notables on a tour of the city. They saw a group of youngsters playing a sandlot baseball game, and Cousins looked at the field, yearningly. "Would you like to bat?" asked the mayor, and Cousins said he would . . . He took his turn at bat and hit a long, clean drive. "Now I'll pitch to you," said the Mayor of Hiroshima, who took the mound and on four pitched balls—three of which were fast-breaking curves—struck him out on called strikes. Cousins couldn't protest the calls, because the umpire was the Rev. Shigwa of the Church of Christ in Hiroshima.

SUSIE Q.

"There's just one thing . . . I haven't figured out a way to get the money, yet . . ."

TRY IT

The next time you "Oldsters" cook your meal out-of-doors check up on yourselves and see if you practice good fire building. First of all, when selecting a site for your fire, locate it several feet away from overhanging branches which might be scorched by the heat. The heat of a fire carries much farther than one might suspect, and even though the branches are many feet above the flame, the rule of placing a fire at least 10 feet away from any tree prevents the heat from burning surface roots.

When the right spot is chosen, clear off all dry leaves, sticks, and material down to the bare earth for at least 4 feet in all directions. Keep the fire small, but have plenty of wood piled close at hand so that you can reach out and add enough to keep the fire burning as you cook.

Put the fire out by splashing water from a pan or bucket onto the fire. BE SURE THAT THE FIRE IS COMPLETELY OUT BEFORE YOU LEAVE IT!

What's The Verdict?

OUTLAWED DEBT

Q. Jones received a promissory note from Smith for $1000 payable on demand, in exchange for a loan of $1000, the note bearing interest of 6 per cent. For various reasons, Smith was unable to pay, and Jones did not sue because he knew Smith had no money. Five years later Jones, hearing that Smith had inherited some money, wrote, reminding him of the note and asking payment. Smith wrote in reply: "I know I owe you the money, but the statute of limitations has barred the debt, so I no longer owe it to you." Jones sues, and Smith claims the statute is a defense. Is he right?

A. As a demand note, the note was due at any time, so under a typical statute no action to collect could be maintained after three years unless the debtor admitted in writing his obligation, or made part payment. Here Smith wrote:

"I know I owe you the money . . ." If he had said "I know I owed you . . ." it would not be acknowledgment of present debt. His use of the present tense is sufficient to remove the bar of the statute of limitations.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Griff Could Use a Few Crowds Like That

The man who owns Ozark Ike's team, the Bugs, must be the wealthiest fellow in America. When his club plays, there's never an empty seat in the stands—and even in spring training games, every park looks like it holds at least 70,000.

PET PEEVE

Memo to Capital Transit:

I know it's harder to turn a bus than a private auto. I also know that your westbound buses from Barney Circle haven't much room to maneuver when they're turning from Pennsylvania ave. se. into Potomac ave.

But that's still no excuse for turning left from the middle lane—usually without a signal of any kind.

Can't you convince the boys on that run that they ought to stay in the left-hand lane for those left turns?

BACK TO SCHOOL

Our darling son arose today
And gathered up his books.
We checked his teeth and fingernails
To qualify his looks.

I told him of the Door to Life
That opens wide, or shuts;
But as our own closed after him
I think he answered: "NUTS."

MISCELLANY

The other day a reader wondered why "good night" is not used as a greeting, in the manner of "good morning" and "good afternoon." Now John Reilly of 3620 15th st. nw. tells me that it is; when he lived in Ireland some years ago, he was greeted with "good night"—and thought they were pulling his leg . . . Gunnar E. Rath of 3912 Ames st. ne. pays tribute to the unidentified motorcycle policeman who came to the rescue of a damsel in distress near the Jefferson Memorial the other afternoon—and changed a flat tire for her . . . Mrs. Ellen J. Keegan of 706 Maple ave., Takoma Park, Md., would like to hear from any District Liner who is familiar with an old, discontinued quilt pattern called "The Pineapple." Her great-grandmother made it . . . Ever-true to the legal profession, Esta and Morris Benson of 5020 2d st. nw. sent out birth announcements (it was a boy) that looked alarmingly like legal writs . . . Trinity Episcopal Church, Columbia pike and South Wayne st., Arlington, Va., is sponsoring a carnival this Friday at 5 p. m. and Saturday at 1 p. m. (games, pony rides, fortune telling, and wonderful eats) . . . The Hanita Club (Pioneer Women of the United States) will hold a dance on the night of the 28th at the Indian Spring Country Club to raise money for a home for Jewish refugee children in Jerusalem . . . Mrs. Mildred R. Swan of 18 Riggs rd., Hyattsville, Md., wants me to explain the lines which ran under a recent picture in this almost perfect newspaper. Apparently stopping a bit too soon, the lines said: ". . . Bobby's sister, Ellen, is a swimming champion and his father."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Motorists seem to have no consideration for bicycle riders.

Our lives are constantly endangered by drivers who pull out from the curb right in front of us; make U-turns across our path when we have the right-of-way; and in general conduct themselves as if we don't exist.

Can't something be done about the situation? N. T.

Dear Mr. T.:

It doesn't seem likely.

The motorist who lacks consideration for bicycle riders is the same fellow who lacks consideration for his fellow motorists—and annually kills tens of thousands of them, and sometimes himself. Bill.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

J. R. Krueger of 808 Otis pl. nw., suggests that the next time the telephone repairman comes your way, ask him to show you the company executive he carries with him.

Anticipating that this suggestion would puzzle me, District Liner Krueger explained that Page 2 of the telephone directory might help me unravel the mystery.

So, in the paragraph captioned "Identification of Employees," I found the following, which I reproduce with the original punctuation:

"Employees . . . carry an identification card, signed by an official of the company which they will be glad to exhibit upon request."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

VACUUM CLEANER SPECIALISTS

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Last Saturday, several families along our street got together for an old-fashioned picnic. Each of us brought something for the lunch. And by sharing what little work was involved, we all had a wonderful time.

Wherever good neighbors work together, you see the same spirit that made our "block picnic" such a success. On a telephone party line, for example. The good party-line neighbor allows some time between calls so that others have a chance to use the line. He answers his own ring promptly and never interrupts when the line is in use, except to make an emergency call.

It all comes down to the simple fact that consideration for others is what makes others considerate of you. And on a party line, that means better service for everyone.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Daughter Cool to Veep's Romance

By Drew Pearson

Capital society's biggest question mark is whether Vice President Alben Barkley will or won't marry the winsome widow from St. Louis, Mrs. Carlton Hadley.

The speculation comes up at every cocktail party, and as usual was the subject of much buzzing at a recent party in honor of Barkley's daughter, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, MRS. HADLEY whose husband is the nephew of the famed general and who holds down the State Department's important Western European desk.

Mrs. MacArthur, asked pointblank whether her father was going to marry Mrs. Hadley, summed it up quite briefly.

"Leave it to Sis," she said, referring to her elder sister, Mrs. Max Truitt.

"Do you think Sis is going to let anyone push her out as Father's official hostess and Second Lady of the Land?"

Note—Mrs. Truitt, as the Vice President's hostess, attends most White House dinners, including the exclusive dinner for Winston Churchill, to which not even Senators Connally and Vandenberg were invited.

British Talk Finance

The British financial conversations, beginning today, are probably as important as any monetary talks held in this country since the days when Alexander Hamilton settled the debts of the 13 Colonies. Here is how the respective American-British viewpoints stack up.

Sir Stafford Cripps and Foreign Minister Bevin have been rehearsing a sales talk which will have a certain amount of American appeal. They will argue that Britain is the chief bastion of west European democracy, that if her system falls, Russian communism is certain for all Europe. In this case, all the investment of the war, the investment of the Marshall Plan, the investment of the British loan, will be lost. Therefore it is better, argue the British, to bail out that investment rather than lose it.

Furthermore, Bevin and Cripps plan to talk in terms of air bases. Britain is the one country relatively safe for B-36 bases. And those bases must be protected not merely from outside aggression but from inside unrest and revolution. A sound British economy, they will argue, is one of the best safeguards.

To remedy this, Foreign Minister Bevin wants an economic union between Britain, Canada and the United States. About this, Cripps has been skeptical. He has hoped for outright United States aid.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson has given up hope of a loan to Britain. The temper of Congres, he knows, is flately opposed. Furthermore, no increased aid for Britain is likely under the Marshall Plan. Therefore, Acheson will propose increased buying of British strategic materials—tin, rubber, etc., which can be stockpiled for emergencies. This can give British economy a lift, but it will be only temporary.

Amiable, easygoing John Snyder, whose St. Louis bank once sidestepped hiring him back, will sit across the table from some of the keenest financial minds in England and Canada during the talks. He heads the United States delegation.

Snyder's panacea is to devalue the British pound, and his plan probably will prevail. This will mean that the pound buys less British food imported from abroad, which may mean another round of wage demands.

But it means also that British exports can better compete abroad. For, devaluing the pound is a painless way of lowering wages, lowering costs and underselling competitors.

However, the Snyder plan also is a stopgap—unless Britain takes advantage of this financial fillip to do two things:

1. Increase industrial efficiency, get new labor-saving machinery and permanently lower costs.
2. Reduce expenditures and balance the budget.

Both will be difficult.

Much more difficult, however, is Britain's long-range basic problem—namely, diminished resources. No stopgap such as devaluing the pound can cure this. The British once were affluent because they were milking Asiatic colonies, because they had their own coal and iron ore and the most modern factories in the world.

Today, British iron ore is exhausted—even as ours is becoming. Coal is down so deep it is expensive to mine, factories are nowhere nearly as modern as ours, labor is not efficient, and Asiatic colonies are gone.

Millions of people in those colonies once lived just above the starvation level while the British Empire wore ermine. Now, with the social revolution in Asia, the British, on a crowded, overpopulated island, still cling to the standards of living they maintained as an empire.

But if John Snyder insists on lowering those standards too much, then Britain may follow the French and Italians and become one-third Communist—or more so. That's why the financial talks opening today are so important.
